They Shot It Out
He Saved Britain
Have It, and Tell It
Salaries Go Down

By Arthur Brisbane

AMERICANS, as Lord Northcliffe remarked, are a "docile people," and stand almost anything. But a prohibition-gangster incident in New York city ought to arouse them. Three beer gangs in Harlem had a misunderstanding in 107th st., and decided to shoot it out. In the course of events, five young children were shot down. One is dead, two more may die.

Prohibition might be a great blessing, if it would work. But it is a big IF.

And meanwhile, with speakeasies on every block in New York city, gangsters shooting it out, and killing children, the people eventually may become impatient.

The dead child, his spine shattered by a bullet that entered the thigh, was five years old.

Little Michael Cevisqua, three years old, has had two bullets taken from his back. The shooting occurred in a city block occupied largely by Sicilians.

All refused to give any evidence, knowing that to talk would mean death.

Crime, well organized, knows how to protect itself. Our so-called "civilized society" does not know how to protect itself.

Lloyd George, after a dangerous operation, was said yesterday to be near death.

Sixty-eight years old, Lloyd George is a man of unusual strength, despite the great burdens that he has carried for more than 30 years, and his strong will should help him.

Without Lloyd George and Clemenceau, Germany would have won the big war, and there would probably be a young Hohenzollern sitting on the British throne today.

As chancellor of the British Exchequer, Lloyd George provided money for the war. As minister of munitions, he supplied munitions for the war.

And as prime minister, HE WON THE WAR.

You will succeed if you have what people want, and LET THEM KNOW YOU HAVE IT.

Mr. Tam May, like other able merchants, understands that.

He began, last Saturday, a sale to celebrate the 50th anniversary of what is now the May store in Los Angeles, and did the biggest day's business in all the 50 years, not excepting recent boom years.

In addition to having the goods, he really ADVERTISED them.

President Hoover continues to protest against reduction in wages, particularly among laborers, mechanics, and others engaged in industry.

The United States Steel Co., reducing dividends and salaries, respects President Hoover's wishes as regards labor in the mills, but cuts the salaries of the clerical force.

The example was followed yesterday afternoon by the Delaware and Hudson Railroad, first of the big railroads to make wholesale pay cuts. Ten per cent is cut off of every salary, from the president, Mr. Lorer, down to the division superintendents. This has not happened on that railroad since 1877.

Two Italian children, Anna Maria, two years old, and her brother, Romano, did yesterday in Rome what Confucius would have called das unbeschriebliche. They tweaked the ears of Mussolini, 48 times, something that nobody else has ever done, even once.

Mussolini is their father, it was his 48th birthday and it is the birthday custom in Italy to tweak the ear once for each year of life.

How free from any "tweaking" Mussolini's career has been since he marched on Rome and took control of Italy's government.

A great war makes all men feel unsure, uncertain. When one steps out, knowing exactly what he wants, putting his will ahead of organized government, he succeeds, at least. FOR A WHILE. Stalin proves it in Russia. Kemal in Turkey, Mussolini in Italy.

Rumors that the Bank of England has been trying to borrow $100,000,000 from the Banque de France annoy the British government.

However, in the war, when money was really hard to get, Britain lent not millions but BILLIONS to France and the other allies.

Cambridge Woman Tells How She Put Police on Trail of Jail Breakers

Fifty state troopers combed the Billerica woods and camp sites today, and searched the highways north of Boston for Ernest Abbott, escaped state prison convict, who is armed with a riot gun.

Captured early today as the result of a woman's tip, Abbott's two companions in the prison break, Hugh Quigley and Thomas Gilpatrick, were taken back to the Charlestown prison and placed in solitary confinement.

The woman who gave the tip leading to their arrest was Mrs. Alfreda Coleridge, 63 Henry st., Cambridge, mother of five children.

Abbott, who was deserted by his companions, "because he was an extra baggage," is believed to have been left by them at Pinehurst, in Billerica, where, according to Gilpatrick, the three went swimming last night.

TWO KILLED ON MAINE TRACK

Brunswick, Me., July 30 (INS)—Two traveling salesmen, William Richards, 1635 Commonwealth ave., Allston, Mass., and David Castleman of Bangor, were instantly killed today when the light automobile truck in which they were driving to Bath was in collision with a Maine Central Railroad passenger train at a grade crossing two miles outside this town.

Identification of the bodies was by means of automobile licenses found on the railroad tracks.

FLIER'S MOTHER ON WBZ TONIGHT

Mrs. Mary L. Polando of 5 Forest Hill ave., Lynn, will tell the world by radio tonight over a nation-wide hookup of her pride in the achievement of her son, John, who with Russell Boardman flew to Istanbul, Turkey.

The Boston Evening American, through the courtesy of Station WBZ and Literary Digest Topics in Brief, has arranged for the appearance of Mrs. Polando on the air at 6:45.

She will be interviewed and introduced by Mayor Curley over a coast-to-coast hookup, made possible by WBZ and Literary Digest.

Mrs. Boardman, wife of the pilot and navigator of the monoplane Cape Cod, which made the record-making transoceanic flight to Turkey, will also appear on the air, providing she arrives in Boston in time from her summer home at Mattapoisett.

JOBLESS MAN KILLS SELF IN 'SHAME'

Seeks Death as He Is Forgiven for Stealing One Bottle of Milk

To keep body and soul together, Joseph Stanton, 70, of Lynn, stole a bottle of milk. It was his first transgression.

Even the police thought he was right about it. And the man he stole from. Their hearts went out to him.

But not Joseph Stanton. Shame was written in his heart. It made no difference that a lifetime of hard work ended in the innocent theft. Or that his landlord had not him out. Or that he had been starving.

DEATH HIS CHOICE.

Ashamed of himself, homeless and hungry. And so those weary steps which had taken him aimlessly about the city hours on end, for two days and two nights, now took on a purpose. The street out of town. The bridge. The river.

They found his body on the Saugus river mudflats today, as Patrolman Joseph Kane waited up on Market st. to tell him he was forgiven by the man he stole from.

Kane, who, as it happened, was dispatched to the river side to get the body, with other officers, told Stanton's story after he saw the corpse at the morgue.

"He took a quart of milk from the step of a Market st. store yesterday morning," said the officer. "Just one bottle out of a big delivery left by the milkman before the store opened.

"I came along and caught him, and this is what he told me:

"'I've been walking around all night and all day yesterday without a bite to eat I was about ready to flop when I found this milk. I couldn't resist it. It was so hot yesterday and another hot day breaking.

JOBLESS FOR WEEKS

"'I haven't got a dime. Not even a penny, and these rags are all the clothes left to me. I worked a long time in the shoe factories but I haven't been able to get a job for so many months I've lost count.

"'The landlord put me out yesterday. I don't blame him. I hadn't paid anything for weeks and had no prospects.'

"So I told him I'd give him a break," continued Kane. "Another officer came along and agreed with me. It only remained to get the storeman to agree. So I told Stanton to shove off but to return this morning and I'd let him know how the storeman felt about it.

"I was there this morning, ready to give him the storeman's forgiveness, but he didn't show up. You know why. Maybe he's better off, but then again, suppose I had pinched him. He'd be alive now."

Disabled Schooner Is Towed to Port

The coast guard patrol boat Active reported by radio to the navy division headquarters here today that she was proceeding to Portland Me., with the schooner Henry H. Chamberlain, dismasted in a gale off Portland last night in tow.

Istanbul, Turkey, July 30—Claiming a new world's non-stop distance record, Russell Boardman of Boston and John Polando of Lynn brought their transatlantic monoplane Cape Cod down at the airport here at 7:20 a. m., Boston daylight time, today.

In the 49 hours and 20 minutes since they took off from Floyd Bennett Field, New York, on Tuesday morning, they had been sighted only once on their 5020-mile trip and that was over Newfoundland, just before they headed across the Atlantic.

WELCOMED BY GREW

Ambassador Joseph C. Grew gave them a hand out of the cockpit and introduced them to the Governor of Istanbul. A squad of Turkish police presented arms during the brief ceremony.

As Ambassador Grew also comes from Boston it was a real hometown greeting that awaited the fliers on their "happy landing."

"We are very happy at having accomplished our purpose of beating the world's non-stop record," Boardman said. "It was a fine trip.

"The hardest part of the trip was last night, flying over the Alps.

"The Atlantic passage was fine, with no bad winds or storms, but it was very foggy. We saw the water only once, near Newfoundland. After that the fog was so heavy we never caught a glimpse of the ocean."

Talking while a Turkish soldier brought a bucket fo water to wash his hands before coinc into the official reception. Polando said he and Boardman got plenty of sleep, but ate little during the trip.

ARE GIVEN PUNCH

"We took turns piloting," he said, "each taking half an hour's sl..p off and on. The fuel just pulled us through. I don't believe there were more than 10 gallons left.

"We would have made a faster record if we had not slowed our pace over France."

ELY'S ICE PLANT GOES ON TEAR

Clouds of smoke and an odor of burning rubber caused considerable excitement today in the executive suite at the State House near Gov. Ely's office when a motor in an electrical water cooler was overcome by the heat and went on rampages.

Fred Dillon, assistant secretary to Gov. Ely, found the trouble and called Fred Kimball, superintendent of the building. After disconnecting the current the cooler was taken to the corridor and the smouldering wires extinguished.

Gov. Ely was not present at the time.

NEXT MEETING IN TOWN NEAR WORCESTER

Head of Auxiliary to Speak There; Imperial Wizard Returns in August

Determined to revivify the mouldering corpse of the Ku Klux Klan in Massachusetts, Imperial Wizard Hiram W. Evans has selected a town on the outskirts of Worcester as the next meeting place for the hooded organization.

From a source close to high officials, it was learned today by the Boston Evening American that Mrs. Robbie Gill Comer, imperial commander of the women's auxiliary of the klan, will invade Massachusetts Wednesday for the first time, to address this meeting.

Mrs. Comer's appearance will mark the official opening of an intensive drive by the klan to enlist the aid of Massachusetts women and women's organizations to the causes of the klan.

EVANS COMING AGAIN

Imperial Wizard Evans will return again to Massachusetts August 22 to conduct another reorganization meeting at Townsend, the scene of the klan's recent reappearance in this state.

Secret meetings are to be held in cities and towns in Greater Boston. One of these meetings will be held in Lynn and another in Waltham. Other meetings are planned for cities throughout the state. Brockton, Attleboro, New Bedford, Fitchburg and Springfield will be the scenes of meetings to be held soon.

DRIVE ON CAPE COD

At the present time Cape Cod is the center of a huge membership drive.

An official high in the ranks of the Massachusetts branch of the klan is now in Buffalo conferring with national officers planning the itinerary for former United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama for this state.

HEFLIN IN NEW ENGLAND

Heflin's tentative itinerary calls for addresses in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York before he invades New England. He has been limited to three addresses in Massachusetts, one in Boston, another in Worcester and the third in Springfield.

Other New England speeches will be made by Heflin in Portland, Me., and Providence and at important centers in New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut.

Contributions to finance the Heflin tour are being solicited, it is said, by James S. Vance, editor and publisher of the Fellowship Forum.

APPEAL FOR FUNDS

"Communism, Socialism, politics, Romanism and racketeering of all kinds," the plea for funds says, "if permitted to go unchecked—will destroy those sacred moral standards of living set up by your sainted forefathers.

"Was there ever a time in our history when such a fearless leader as Senator J. Thomas Heflin was more greatly needed than right now?

"In the name of good citizenship, I appeal to you to send $5 or $10. If voluntary contributions are not available Protestant America will suffer a great loss."

'AL' CAPONE UP FOR SENTENCE

Chicago, July 30 (AP)—Government and defense were ordered by Judge James H. Wilkerson today to present their evidence in the prohibition and income tax cases against "Scarface" Alphonse Capone at a hearing beginning at 2 p. m.

Only the reading of the indictments occupied the brief morning session of court. Capone himself may be required to testify during the hearing.

"If the defendant asks leniency," said Judge Wilkerson, "he must be ready to answer all proper questions concerning himself."

The judge said that "any agreement the defense and prosecution might have made had no binding influence upon the court."

Judge Wilkerson explained he knew nothing of the facts in the case. He could only perform his duty, he said, by hearing fully the evidence and determining the degree of guilt.

The hearing lasted less than 10 minutes. The big gangster stood before the bar with his hands behind his back, twisting a white handkerchief. He teetered a bit on his toes as he continued his methodical gum-chewing.

As the judge looked straight at Capone and said, "The defendant must understand he can have no agreement with the court," the gangster ceased his chewing.

BOARDMAN SETS RECORD ON FLIGHT

more than eight hours at the airdrome for the Cape Cod's arrival later pusher into a small reception room of the Turkish air commandant, where Turkish aviators and civilian officials of the Turkish Aviation League offered punch and cakes to the American airmen.

Asked whether he preferred punch or lemonade, Polando laughed and said:

But he and Boardman both drank the punch and despite their fatigue beamed as the Governor of Istanbul and Ambassador Grew toasted them.

Polando handed over to the Governor a letter from President Hoover to President Mustapha Kemal of Turkey. The aviators were in such good spirits they even consented to sign a dozen autographs.

SET NEW RECORD

By hitting Istanbul "on the nose" at the end of their long and hazardous journey, Boardman and Polando were believed to have bettered by more than 100 miles the last previous long-distance record, set by the French airmen Captain Dieudonne Coste and Lieut. Maurice Bellonte, who flew 4900 miles from Paris to Tatsaibar, northern Manchuria, in 1929. They also bettered by 1400 miles Col. Lindbergh's New York to Paris mark.

Few transatlantic flights have had a more surprising ending than this daring venture. The fliers roared over the densely populated capitals of Europe without their presence becoming known, and even left their "calling card"—in the shape of a packet of mail—dropped in the center of Le Bourget flying field, Paris.

This packet was dropped in one of several parachutes the fliers had taken along expressly for the purpose of lowering such messages along their trail.

An airport mechanic picked it up near one of the hangars, but no one had heard the plane as it passed. The packet was addressed to "the Mayor of Paris" and the port commander sent it over to the president of the municipal council.

It appeared not to have been on the ground long, for it was still dry when the mechanic picked it out of the dew-soaked grass.

The envelope was inscribed, "This package has been dropped by Russell Boardman, pilot of the airplane Cape Cod in course on a non-stop flight between New York and Istanbul."

Modest and unassuming concerning their great venture, probably one of the most astounding aerial navigation feats in history, Boardman and Polando nevertheless were amazed to learn that they had flown across the entire map of continental Europe without once being seen or heard.

MADE 100 MILES AN HOUR

They realized that fog and mist probably obscured their plane from view during a large part of the journey, but felt for certain that Paris would realize they were in the vicinity when they figuratively swooped down and rang the 'aerial door-bell' of the French capital.

Considering weather conditions and the speed capacity of their plane, Boardman and Polando made good time on their long flight. They averaged something above 100 miles an hour for the entire journey.

Istanbul, thoroughly accustomed to the roar of airplanes through constant mail and passenger service maintained between this city and the capitals of western Europe, nevertheless was thrilled over the brilliantly successful termination of the first non-stop flight ever staged with the "Gateway to the Dardanelles" as its goal.

Turkish aeronautical authorities were loud in praise of the "bull's-eye" navigation of the fliers, and acclaimed it a flight equalled in perfection only by the memorable feat of Lindbergh.

Not only did the fliers reach Istanbul without stopping, but they made the journey in clockwork schedule. They allowed themselves 99 hours for the journey, and made it with 42 minutes to spare.

14TH SEA CROSSING.

Boardman, pilot of this record-breaking plane, is 33 years old and has been flying for ten years. Polando is 27, married, and employed by the Eastcoast Aircraft Company of Boston. His home is at Lynn.

The Boardman plane, "Cape Cod," was the 14th to cross the North Atlantic from west to east since the aerial pilgrimage was begun 12 years ago by John Alcock and Arthur W. Brown of England, who flew from Newfoundland to Ireland.

The 13th crossing was made yesterday when Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., landed their plane, "Miss Veedol," in Wales on their way around the world in a race against the recent record of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty.

FIFTH HOP THIS YEAR.

The Cape Cod's success brings the number of successful crossings of the North Atlantic from America to Europe to five for this year, the greatest number for a single year since the Atlantic first was flown. First to cross this year were Post and Gatty, shortly followed by Otto Hillig and Holger Hoirik.

Then came Alexander Magyar and George Endres and now Pangborn and Herndon and Boardman and Polando.

HERNDON HOPS FOR BERLIN

Croydon, England, July 30 (AP)—Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn brought their red monoplane to earth at Croydon airfield at 3:15 a. m. today (Boston Time) after a transatlantic flight broken by a landing last night near Cardigan, Wales.

The fliers left their plane and went into the Croydon pilot quarters for breakfast while their gas tanks were being refilled and other preparations made for a hop to Berlin, the next step in their attempt to break the Post-Gatty 'round the world record. They planned to reach Berlin this afternoon.

The two pilots set the time of their transatlantic flight at exactly 32 hours.

"It wouldn't vary a minute," said Pangborn. "We estimated the distance at about 3150 miles.

"We wouldn't have had to land if it hadn't been for the fog. We were unable to tell exactly where we were although we knew just about the location, so we came down. In order to get above the fog we had to fly at about 14,000 feet most of the way."

Pangborn explained that they had the wind with them during much of the crossing.

COOLING WINDS HELP DRIVE HEAT WAVE

Fair Weather Follows Showers After a Death Toll of 23

Boston, partially freed by last night's thunder showers from the sweltering heat wave that parched the city for three days and claimed 23 lives in New England, today was promised fair and cooler weather for tonight and tomorrow by the weather man.

Clouds which early in the day promised a continuance of the rains that brought some relief to the city at 8:30 last night were dispelled by a bright sun and gentle northwesterly winds.

Yesterday's scorching heat, which reached a record-breaking 97 degrees during the afternoon, was predicted today to be low 80's, with cooling breezes prevailing.

At 1:45 p. m. today the mercury stood at 80, or 17 degrees lower than at the same hour yesterday.

Despite the drop in temperature, however, another victim of heat prostration was added today to the long list of stricken. Michael Walsh, 71, of Cherokee st., Roxbury, was overcome while dringing a team in Warren ave., Charlestown. He was treated at Haymarket Relief Station for prostration and a cut on the leg sustained when he toppled from the wagon seat.

TEMPERATURE LOWER

At 11:45 today the mercury stood at 81, 13 degrees lower than at the same hour yesterday. Steady northwesterly winds were expected to hold the thermometer in check throughout the day, according to the forecast.

Scattered showers will fall over Boston during the day, and even cooler weather will prevail this evening and tomorrow, the weather man said.

Before the scorching heat retreated before the rains, eleven more victims were added to Tuesday's toll. They included six persons drowned.

Beside the 12 deaths yesterday there were numerous prostrations, among them Judge John Burns, youngest jurist on the superior court bench, who collapsed at his home in Arlington, after attending the funeral of the wife of Judge Patrick Keating, a colleague. Judge Burns was reported recovering at his home today.

LICENSE GOES IF YOU HIT-RUN

Neglect of motorists to report accidents to the registry of motor vehicles will no longer be tolerated, according to a statement issued today by Morgan T. Ryan, registrar. He says he will suspend licenses from seven to 30 days of all operators who do not comply with the law in the future.

Coincident with this announcement Registrar Ryan said he has recently suspended the licenses of nine motorists. They are:

ELY AND MAYOR CABLE FLIERS AT INSTANBUL

Great Boston Reception Plans Under Way for Boardman and Polando

The congratulations of an appreciative city and state were sent winging across the seas to Russell Boardman and John Polando in Turkey today for their achievement in bringing a world's aviation record here.

Both Governor Ely and Mayor Curley cabled their pleasure over the feat, the mayor informing Boardman he intends to present him a loving cup on his return.

Plans also got under way for an official reception by the citizens of Boston when the fliers come home, at which time they will be showered with honors.

Meantime, prominent persons, particularly in the aviation world, were expressing their enthusiasm over the record flight of the two local men.

TEXT OF MESSAGES

Governor Ely cabled them at Istanbul:

"Massachusetts congratulates you, her citizens, on most remarkable and longest flight ever made."

Mayor Curley's message read:

"The City of Boston extends most hearty congratulations to you upon the honor which you bring to Boston through your successful flight to Turkey.

"The silver victory cup which the city of Boston procured in September of 1930 to present to you and which, due to burning your plane prevented your flight, will be presented to you on your return."

The mayor explained the cup had remained in the office of Director of Public Celebrations Stanton P. White since the burning of Boardman's plane prevented him from attempting a hop to Dublin and return.

It is inscribed:

"Presented to Russell Boardman by Hon. James M. Curley, mayor, for the citizens of Boston with the sincerest wishes for successful overseas flights from Boston to Dublin, Ireland and return, Sept. 1930."

Mayor Curley believes it will be a great delight to present the cup to Boardman at this time as a souvenir of his Dublin attempt.

RECEPTION PLANS

The mayor and Director White were to confer on plans for a public reception for the fliers.

At the same time similar plans were being formulated in Lynn where the greatest public interest in the history of the city is looked for.

While flags on all public buildings in the Shoe City were ordered flown today in honor of John Polando, a special meeting of the City Council was called for tomorrow night to discuss the reception.

Fellow fliers at the Boston Airport were particularly elated at the achievement of Boardman and Polando, and were also getting ready to do them honor on their return.

News of their safe arrival in Turkey was greeted with cheers by assembled fliers and aviation attaches.

PRAISE AT AIRPORT

Harry Copland, manager for the Curtiss-Wright Co., said:

"That's the best news I've heard in years. I always knew they would get there, but at times it didn't look as though they'd get the break in the weather they wanted. I'm proud to say I know both boys personally."

Olcott Payson, vice-president Skyways, Inc., said:

"I'm certainly glad to hear that news. The deserve their success because they worked so hard for it.

Lieut. Joseph A. Wilson, commanding officer, Army Air Corps, said:

"An exceptionally remarkable flight. I believe Boardman has vindicated himself in the eyes of everyone. It is truly a marvelous feat."

THE REST OF THE NEWS

Rounding a bend on the "scooter," he saw an engine bearing down upon him. He leaped from the "scooter," receiving the injuries which may prove fatal.

Loretta's Elopement Ride Has a Sequel

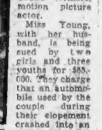
Hollywood, July 30—An automobile ride during their elopement may prove to have been an expensive trip for Loretta Young, featured screen player, and Grant Withers, motion picture actor.

Loretta Young

Miss Young, with her husband, is being sued by two girls and three youths for $85,000. They charge that an automobile used by the couple during their elopement crashed into an automobile in which they were riding. Miss Young recently filed suit for divorce here from Withers, charging non-support.

Mrs. Field to Rough It on Wyoming Ranch

Chicago, July 30—Mrs. Evelyn Marshall Field, whose alimony settlement of $1,000,000 a year when she was divorced last year from Marshall Field II at Reno is said to be a record, was in Chicago yesterday on her way to a ranch in Cody, Wyo., for the remainder of the summer.



Mrs. Field

"We all love to fish and ride horseback," said Mrs. Field. "We really intend to rough it in log cabins for six weeks."

Actress Goes Abroad to Clear Up Rumors

New York, July 30—Jeanette MacDonald, pretty titian-haired actress, will sail aboard the Ile de France today for Europe to clear up a number of recent rumors she announced.

She is going to prove she did not recently commit suicide, and was not seriously injured in an automobile accident in France and has never been abroad before. She will also deny she was in love with a royal prince and that his bride died her in the eye or attempted to disfigure her face with acid.

SKY TRAIL FROM STATUE OF LIBERTY TO GREAT MOSQUE OF DISTANT ISTANBUL

Here's the new path of glory just blazed across the sky! Map shows the course followed by the big Bellanca monoplane Cape Cod in record-breaking hop from New York to Istanbul, Turkey. The plane was manned by Russell Boardman of Boston and John Polando of Lynn. They made their epochal flight of 5020 miles ahead of their scheduled time. It took them just a little over 49 hours to span an air trail that led from the Statue of Liberty to the great mosque in the ancient Turkish capital. In setting aviation history the triumphant fliers fulfilled a dream of years—accomplished a feat that has won them world-wide acclaim. They cruised the skies unsighted until, at 7:20 a. m. today, they circled down to a happy landing amid the cheers of a waiting throng at the end of the longest non-stop ride in history.

MEXICANS BACK WAR ON CHURCH

Mexico City, July 30 (AP)—The majority bloc of the Federal Senate today proposed that the Senate issue a manifesto approving the policy of Gov. Adalberto Tejeda toward the Catholic church in the state of Vera Cruz.

The Governor is enforcing the recently enacted state law limiting to 15 the number of priests who may discharge their religious offices in the state.

The Senate bloc proposed that the manifesto uphold the Tejeda policy as a model for other states to follow.

Mexico City, July 30—A report reached Bishop Mendez of Tehuantepec last night that citizens of Puerto Mexico, Vera Cruz, surrounded the Catholic church and priest there and defied state government agents to attempt to arrest the priest.

It was reported that the agents, seeing the temper of the crowd, withdrew, and the priest still conducts services in the church.

DOG LAW HIT AS 'NEEDLESS'

Springfield, July 30 (AP)—Stating he has yet to know of a case of rabies in this State this year, Theodore W. Pearson, western Massachusetts agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has sent a letter to the West Springfield Board of Selectmen requesting the board to rescind its order for restrain of all dogs.

He believes the restrain is a needless hardship.

The order was issued as a result of a State-wide suggestion of the State health authorities. Mr. Pearson today pointed out that Springfield and many other municipalities have failed to comply with the suggestion of Commissioner George H. Bigelow.

HEAT KILLS TWO IN PROVIDENCE

Thomas Flanagan, 58, and Ruth T. Swars, 60, were the two victims, which brought this city's heat toll since Monday to four. Traffic Patrolman John F. Little was overcome at his downtown post and sent home after treatment.

Although the temperature here today was five degrees lower than yesterday, the high humidity and effect of the broiling heat of the past two days are believed to have caused the two fatalities.

Lose Life Trying to Aid Aged Woman

Barre, Vt., July 30 (AP)—Darrell L. Kelley, 20, was killed early today when he attempted to remove a live wire which obstructed the path of an aged woman.

The wire was brought down during a severe storm yesterday and carried 2300 volts. He leave a widow and two children.

Drinkers Buy Enough Stout for Bonus and Dividend

London, July 30 (AP)—The depression which has reduced the profits and dividends of many concerns has not hit the Dublin brewery firm of Arthur Guinness & Co., headed by Lord Iveagh.

The company today announced a final dividend of 15 per cent, with an additional bonus of 5 per cent, both less income tax.

With the interim dividend of 15 per cent the total for the year is 30 per cent, the same as last year's.

BURLAK GIRL IN PUTNAM STRIKE

Putnam, Ct., July 30 (AP)—Miss Anna Burlak, youthful organizer of the National Textile Workers Union, who, police said, was largely responsible for recent strikers riots at Central Falls, R. I., was today working actively among the 850 strikers at two local silk mills.

Shortly after she arrived last night she denied the National Textile Workers Union was in any way affiliated with the Communist Party. Asked to what extent the local strikers would carry their activities, she said the workers would "remain a fighting unit and agree to no arbitration until their demands were met.

Joseph M. Tone, State labor commissioner, was expected to address the strikers at a mass meeting today.

ZEPPELIN HOME FROM ARCTIC

Berlin, July 30 (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin, home from her Arctic cruise which started last Friday, circled over Tempelhof airdrome at 6:20 p. m. today—1:20 p. m. Boston daylight time.

Lord Mayor Heinrich Sahm had arrived early to extend the city's official congratulations, and Theodore van Guerard, minister of transportation, was on hand to represent the government.

Grid Coach Dies

A victim of infantile paralysis, Edmund Goodreau, football coach at Malden High School, died today. He was stricken with the disease while at a camp at Wilton, N. H.

BALKS DEALING IN GOLD STOCK

New York, July 30 (AP)—The Board of Governors of the New York Curb Exchange today suspended dealings in the capital stock of Engineer Gold Mines, Ltd., Inc. until further notice.

No official explanation for the decision of the Governors was forthcoming. Charles V. Bob, whose financial operations have been under investigation by prosecuting officials, is listed as president of the company.

The company was incorporated in Delaware, on Oct. 20, 1923, with a perpetual charter.

The company works under a 999 year lease a group of gold mining claims near the headwaters of the Yukon rover in British Columbia. Its authorized capital stock totals 1,625,000 divided into shares of $5 par value of which 1,000,000 is outstanding.

Grasshoppers Are to Be Turned Into Fresh Farm Eggs

Lamar, Col., July 30 (AP)—Farmers of this grasshopper-invested region have devised a means of turning the destructive pests into chicken feed.

With troughs placed in front of automobiles, the farmers drive through grain fields. The hoppers fall into clear water in the troughs. They are poured later into sacks to dry and will be fed to chickens next winter.

One farmer gathered as much as 30 bushel of hoppers to the acre by this method of "harvesting."

MACHINE GUN IN BANK ROBBERY

Canton, O., July 30 (AP)—Three unmasked robbers, armed as railroad workmen, robbed the Brewster Banking Company in southwestern Stark County of $40,000 in currency and bonds today. Two of the men were armed with pistols and the other carried a machine gun.

Banking officials said the bulk of the loot was in currency.

Bank employes were lined with their faces to the wall while the robbers looted the cashier's cage and vaults.

MALDEN HIGH COACH DIES

Stricken only Sunday with infantile paralysis, Edward J. Goodreau, 57, coach of football and baseball and teacher of chemistry in Malden High School, died today at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Goodreau was taken ill at his father's home, Pine st., Plaistow, N. H., and was taken by automobile to the hospital.

He was born in Plaistow and was married a few years ago to Barbara Atwood, a Haverhill school teacher. The couple had one child, Barbara, 2.

Goodreau went to Malden high school in 1924 as assistant coach and the next year filled the same position at Haverhill High School. In 1927 he returned to Malden as assistant to Coach Henry E. Batchelder.

He is survived by two brothers, four sisters and his parents, besides his wife and baby. His brother, Leo, died a little more than a year ago

LLOYD GEORGE MAKING GAINS

London, July 30 (AP)—An official statement made public today, regarding the condition of David Lloyd George said:

"He passed a restful night and his strength is well maintained. His condition so far continues to be satisfactory."

Neither the family nor the physicians have announced the exact nature of the operation which, however, is known to have been severe enough to test the powers of resistance of a much younger man.

Nothing in available reports suggested that Lloyd George was in greater danger than could be expected considering his age, and it was emphasized that he is a man of vigorous constitution.

SOVIET AUCTION HALTED BY LAW

Springfield, July 30 (AP)—The Chamber of Commerce Merchant's Bureau today invoked law to prevent a undvertised auction sale of rugs here by the Amtorg Trading Corporation. The law cited forbids sale of merchandise that has been transported from town to town for that purpose.

These rugs were brought here from Boston, where they had been offered for sale, it was learned.

The merchants have been interested in the sale on the possibility that the goods were being "dumped" by the Soviet government.

Following announcement that the auction had been cancelled the rugs were taken over by a local rug merchants at nominally on consignment and offered at private sale at listed prices.

Four Perish, 3 Driven Mad in Desert in Mexico

Nogales, Sonora, Mex., July 30—"You are stranded on a desert island with a brilliant scientist, his wife and son, your fiancee, your best friend and two half breed guides. Only three can be saved. Which would you choose to live and which to die"? . . . . . .

Thomas A. Edison's youthful scholarship candidates, faced with this test question, answered it in various and ingenious ways.

But in the sands of the desert between here and Mexicali, an unschooled Mexican, Augusten Pinto, found life's answer written:

"The strongest will survive."

Pinto was traveling the path of a stage coach which ten days ago started for Mexicali with five men, a 16-year-old mother and her month-old baby.

First he came upon the broken-down coach and two empty water jugs. Next he found the body of the girl mother with her child clutched to her breast.

Traveling on, he found the body of one of the men, Jesus Orantes, and a little farther along he found the remains of this man's brother, Ramon.

Finally he overlook the other three men, Juan Ojeda, husband of the young mother; Vincente Gutierrez, driver of the stage, and his son, Vincente, Jr. They were insane but may recover.

RED CROSS TO AID JOBLESS

Washington, July 30 (AP)—Some local Red Cross chapters have indicated to headquarters here that they are planning to co-operate with other agencies in relief work, including unemployment, this week.

They are consulting national officials of the American Red Cross on the subject.

Chairman Payne said today he felt that in the instances reported it was a matter for the local chapters to decide.

Under its charter, national headquarters is barred from assisting in unemployment relief, but this is not regarded as extending to co-operation by local chapters.

Payne said, however, that in any event officials would insist local chapters should not pledge the national organization in any steps toward co-operation they may take.

The Red Cross recently said it could not assist destitute miners in West Virginia and other coal sections. It also vigorously opposed the proposal during the last Congress that it be given federal funds to expend in drouth relief work.

ARMY AIR FLEET LANDS HERE

Nineteen army reserve pilots, in 10 observation planes, arrived at Boston Airport this afternoon from Mitchel Field, New York, to attend a conference with the Boston Reserve Officers' Association.

Led by Lieut. P. J. Kenney, regular army air corps, the fliers were met by Lieut. Joseph A. Wilson and members of the local reserve association.

The conference was arranged to discuss the question of obtaining more flying hours per year for reserve pilots. Flying time for the reserves has been curtailed since the first of the year.

A banquet will be given the visiting pilots tonight by the Boston association.

Whistle of Trains at Crossings Stands

Boston & Maine railroad trains will contine to whistle when they approach the three grade crossings in Orange by order of the State Public Utilities Commission. The board today turned down the request of the selectmen of Orange to prohibit or limit whistling.

HAPPY MEMBERS OF POLANDO'S FAMILY

MRS. VIOLET PALAMINI LEO POLANDO

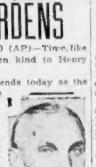
MRS. MARY L. POLANDO MRS. LEO POLANDO MISS ALBERTA POLANDO

Success of the record flight of Russell Boardman and John Polando brought joy and many congratulatory messages today to the home of Polando at 5 Forest Hills ave. in Lynn, where members of his family who had awaited the news there posed for the Boston Evening American staff photographer. The aviator's happy mother, Mrs. Mary L. Polando, 58, was fairly dancing with glee. Her daughter, Miss Alberta Polando, equally happy after a long vigil, told how they all huddled about the radio waiting anxiously for the good news

FORD, 68, LOAFS IN GARDENS

Detroit, July 30 (AP)—Time, like Fortune, has been kind to Henry Ford.

So said his friends today as the motor magnate observed his 68th birthday anniversary.



Henry Ford

Ford did not "celebrate." For it was "just another day" to him. Apparently in the best of health and spirits, he spent most of the day in the gardens of his estate, Fairlane, in Dearborn, and in the engineering laboratory of his plant "just across the road."

Messages of greeting came from various parts of the world. Two came from Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, and Harvey S. Firestone, tire manufacturer, Ford's closest friends.

BIG DAMAGE IN VERMONT

St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 30 (AP) Communities in northeastern Vermont, checking up today on the results of a storm which swept this section last night, found a trail of damage throughout the country-side.

The Passumpsic river flooded hundreds of acres and swept away hundreds of tons of hay. Miles of back roads were washed out and at Willoughby Lake six miles of road were under water.

Fallen trees and huge boulders blocked highways for hours. Many telephone poles were down.

ENGLAND BANK RATE BOOSTED

London, July 30 (INS)—Indicating the seriousness of the recent drain on its gold reserves, the Bank of England today raised its rediscount rate another point to 4½ per cent.

The action of the directors was not unexpected. Last week they raised the rate from 2½ to 3½ per cent.

The bank rate invariably rises by points but descends by half points.

A solemn warning that Britain faces a serious budget deficit unless economies are effected was sounded by Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, in a speech in the House of Commons today.

The chancellor, however, took occasion to scout reports appearing in the press that Britain was facing bankruptcy.

Dorchester Child Burned by Flareback

Anita Del Rosa, two, of that address was the victim of first-degree burns after a lighted match caused a flareback from the Del Rosa gas stove. Patrolman Ernest Worcester rushed the child to the hospital, after Mrs. Josephine Del Rosa, 30, mother of the child, raced the sidewalk with the victim after the accident.

UNION BLAMED IN P. O. STRIKE

After hours of conference today in an effort to settle the strike tying up construction of the new Boston postoffice, representatives of the union involved were still unable to announce any agreement.

The conference began yesterday at the offices of Martin Witte, attorney for the Engineers' Union, Local 4, and Ironworkers' Union, Local 7. It was resumed this morning and was still going on this afternoon.

Secretary H. M. Comerford of Local 263, International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, in a statement, said:

"The engineers working on the job are not to blame, but the supervisor and his assistants are. These officers have taken on themselves the right to call strikes. These men are not legal representatives of the local union.

"The general president has taken unto himself the right to appoint supervisors over some local unions and by so doing has denied the members the right to conduct their business in accordance with the laws of the organization."

BIG BRITISH LORD JAILED IN FRAUD

London, July 30 (INS)—Lord Kylsant, for many years director of the Royal Mail Steam Packet and its affiliated companies, the largest shipping organization in the world, today was found guilty of falsifying a report of the firm's income and sentenced to one year's imprisonment.

Lord Kylsant had been indicted on charges of issuing false reports for the years 1926 and 1927, indicating a favorable balance while the companies in reality had sustained huge losses. Counsel for the crown charged that by showing a balance, Lord Kylsant was able to profit personally to the extent of a 5 per cent dividend on the profits shown, in accordance with an agreement made when the company was formed.

TREASURY WILL SAVE MILLIONS

Washington, July 30 (AP)—Following the directions of President Hoover, the Treasury has reduced its estimated expenditures for the 1933 fiscal year $7,000,000 below the amount the different divisions requested.

Acting Secretary Mills turned his attention to the preparation of this treasury budget for next year as soon as the German financial situation quieted down and for the last week has held hearings in which he trimmed requested appropriations all along the line in an effort to save money during the next 12 months.

PLANES SOON TO FLY HIGH AS PICCARD

Paris, July 30 (INS)—The mechanical devices for flying at great speed at altitudes almost as high as those recently achieved by Prof. Auguste Piccard, the Belgian scientist, have been developed to a great degree and are even now coming into general use, according to Thomas F. Hamilton, aviation expert of New York.

Hamilton plans a visit shortly to Piccard's laboratory in Brussels to discuss with the daring inventor his recent balloon voyage in a sealed aluminum ball to a height of 52,000 feet.

"Only three things are necessary for regular airplane travel at the height to which Prof. Piccard rose in his balloon," Mr. Hamilton declared.

"The first is a hermetically closed passenger cabin, comparable to Piccard's aluminum ball. Air pressure in such a cabin would be kept at sea level and thus the passengers would suffer no discomfiture from the rarified atmosphere, such as arm. aviators suffer today at 20,000 feet. Such a cabin would not be difficult to build.

"Secondly, one must feed compressed air to the motors. But this is already being done with superchargers. Already one of my firms has perfected a supercharger which gives so much power to the Boeing army pursuit plane that it can fight and maneuver at 23,000 feet.

U. S. BANKERS IN QUANDARY

Washington, July 30 (AP)—Latin-American countries' financial difficulties today remained a problem for private bankers with the United States government adopting a hands off policy.

Although conditions were being watched closely by administration officials it was said the government had decided it could not participate actively in any relief.

The state department was understood to be ready to supply bankers with all available data, but has reserved judgment upon the merits of individual queries after bankers had asked the informal opinion of the administration on requested credit extension.

Walker to Take Cure in Germany

New York, July 30 (AP)—Mayor James J. Walker, who says his teeth and heart bother him as much as city problems, expects to sail for Berlin and the German health spas within a week.

One Dead in Plane Crash

Topeka, Kan., July 30 (AP)—A stunting airplane fell from about 2000 feet into the Kaw river last night, killing a passenger, A. J. McKimmey, automobile dealer, and critically injuring the pilot, Howard Athons, both of Topeka.

IN CONTROL OF JORDAN MARSH STORE

MITTONS IN CONTROL AT JORDAN MARSH CO.

tion of store policies and merchandising and service standards. George W. Mitton has been connected with Jordan Marsh Company for 44 years—32 years in major executive positions and 19 years as president.

Richard Mitton will be president and directly in charge of all operations of the business. He has been connected with the Jordan Marsh Company business for 25 years—for 20 years occupying major executive positions and 15 years as vice president of the company.

OTHER OFFICIALS

Edward R. Mitton will be merchandising vice-president, and as such will be in charge of the entire merchandising operations of the store. Edward R. Mitton has been connected with the Jordan Marsh Co. business for 13 years—10 years in major executive positions and director with general merchandising responsibility for nine years.

Thomas F. Lockney will be vice-president in charge of supplies, maintenance, equipment and all store properties. Mr. Lockney has been connected with the business for 40 years in major executive positions and for nine years has been a director of the company.

Harry F. Twomey, publicity director of the concern, was elected a director to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Hudson's resignation.

STATEMENT ISSUED

George W. Mitton issued the following statement:

"Due to the fact that I have regained my health, I am again able to assume active management duties. I believe that my many years of experience in and knowledge of the Jordan Marsh Co. business will with the assistance of the above named organization prove of great benefit to the company.

"Any criticisms or suggestions by the public, looks for letter or personal interview with any of the above-named officers, will be most gratefully received."

Mr. Mitton further stated that the store would continue to strive to give to the Boston public the utmost in fashion and quality for the dollar, and continue the policy of "Satisfaction Guaranteed," for which the store has always been famous.

As to a price policy, Mr. Mitton said:

"Of course, the dollar buys more today than it has for many years and we intend to take full advantage of that fact in passing these savings on to our customers, but you may be assured that our real efforts will be to sell only Jordan Marsh Company quality merchandise and that as reasonably priced as is possible. Furthermore, the public can be assured in this time of so much poor quality and shoddy merchandise that it will be our aim to have the people able to find at Jordan's the best the markets of the world afford and to make good the old saying, 'If you can get it at all, you can get it at Jordan's.'"

HUDSON'S HISTORY

Ralph C. Hudson, for 10 years president and general manager of O'Neill's, Baltimore, was, at the beginning of 1930, due to the illness of George W. Mitton, who for 20 years had directed the Jordan business, drafted by the board of directors of Hahn Department Stores, of which he is vice-president, to do an important job with the Jordan Marsh Company as executive vice-president.

Upon the completion of this work and the return of Mr. Mitton to active participation in the management, Mr. Hudson again returns to Baltimore to take up the work that he so successfully carried on for so long a time in the continued development of the O'Neill business.

Mr. Hudson expresses great gratification that he again has the privilege of becoming a Baltimorean and looks forward with pleasure to renewing his many friendships there.

GERMANS' PLAN NEARLY READY

Berlin, July 30 (AP)—By the end of this week Chancellor Bruening is expected to make public the plan of action the cabinet has been working out in almost uninterrupted sessions for the nation's offensive against its economic difficulties.

By that time, it is expected, the financial experts of several nations will have completed surveying Germany's needs and lining up creditors to leave credits undisturbed in Germany.

Swiss, French and Dutch still are holding out for guarantees that German industry is not ready to agree to immediately, but a settlement is expected tomorrow or perhaps tonight.

Then the way will be open for resumption of normal commercial bank payments on Monday. Monthend payroll demands meanwhile will be met with the aid of restrictions now prevailing on bank payments under which withdrawals of any amount are permitted if for certified payroll or similar purposes.

Coast Guard Aids Schooner In Trouble

New London, Ct., July 30—Word was received at the local Coast Guard base here early today by wireless that the schooner Henrietta Chamberlain was in distress and needed help. Word was sent to the Coast Guard boat Active to go to the assistance of the disabled craft. The schooner is located 85 miles off Rye Beach.

EIGHT WOMEN ATTEND FIRST BIRTH CLINIC

Providence, R. I., July 30—Sponsored—and opposed—by college heads, doctors and clergy, the first birth control clinic in New England opened in Rhode Island today, with eight "customers" in the first hour.

The new clinic is scheduled for two days a week, Thursdays and Fridays, at 163 North Main st, with a drive for membership planned after the New England conference of the American Birth Control League next October.

Clarence A. Barbour, president of Brown University, and Rev. William Appleton Lawrence, rector of Christ Episcopal Church and son of Bishop Lawrence of Boston, are listed among the sponsors of the clinic.

BISHOP OPPOSED

Bishop William A. Hickey, head of the Catholic archdiocese of Providence, is publicly opposed. Comments of the latter are expected to be published in "The Visitor," the Catholic newspapar of this section, due for publication Saturday.

Today's opening, in the unpretentious setting of an old-fashioned house, saw a physician, a graduate nurse and a social welfare worker in attendance. When the doors opened at 10:45, two women were awaiting admittance. Six others called by noon.

All applicants for advice, the clinic attendants pointed out, must have the recommendation of their family physician, a hospital or a social service organization.

"The aim of the league is to keep the work on a high, ethical plane," they explained.

MUST BE MARRIED.

Married women only are admitted, and of these, expectant mothers are barred, according to the rules of the clinic.

The officers of the organization are listed as Mrs. Henry Solomon, president; Mrs. Maurau S. Pearce, Mrs. A. T. Wall, Jr., and Mrs. A. Livingston Kelley, Jr., vice-presidents; Mrs. Robert H. Whitmarsh, treasurer; Mrs. Robert J. Beedy, secretary.

The governing board of physicians is headed by Dr. Edward S. Brackett, chairman; Dr. Paul Appleton, vice-chairman, and Dr. Anna M. Dannenman, secretary.

66 New Infantile Cases in New York

New York, July 30 (AP)—Sixty-six new cases of infantile paralysis, ten more than on any day previously, were reported to the health department today.

Thieves Get Jewelry

Thieves, who ripped the screening from the rear door of his home, ransacked the apartment of Benjamin Waldfogel of Blue Hill ave., Dorchester, and escaped with jewelry valued at $285.

Five Drowned as Motorboat Sinks

Cookeville, Tenn., July 30 (AP)—Five of eight persons in a motorboat that sank at Burgess Falls last night were drowned. A rescue party raised the craft and recovered four bodies today.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Whitson of Cookeville, Whitson's sister, Mrs J. P. Barnett of Nashville, Tenn., and her two young sons, James and Robert Barnett. Twin sisters of Whitson swam to safety, towing Beecher Cass, 45.

WOMAN AIDS IN CAPTURE OF CONVICTS

man (Gilpatrick) on the sidewalk beside an automobile, putting on a coat and looking to see how it fitted him, in the glare of an arc light, which is across the street.

"The other fellow was in the seat of the car. Then Mrs. Mitchell, next door, called me on the 'phone and told me that two men were outside acting suspiciously. So I called the police.

TRAPPED IN AUTO

"My dog, Trixie, started to bark, but I silenced her.

"Then the police came and I saw it all from the widow. The men didn't have a chance to get away. They were certainly surprised. I heard the words, 'Stick 'em up.'

"Trixie started barking then and I let her, and the whole neighborhood woke up.

"Quigley was taken out of the back seat and Gilpatrick, who had got in front, was also taken out. They were brought to my doorstep where Quigley collapsed. He asked for water and I went and got them both some.

"Then one of the policemen gave Quigley a cigarette to brace him up before they took both men away. I didn't sleep any more and the children were all awake, too, with the excitement."

It was only after the capture, when Mrs. Coleridge went to the front door with her children, that she learned the two youths were the escaped convicts.

Still in their prison clothing, which was torn in many places, Quigley and Gilpatrick had gone to Cambridge after their swim at Pinehurst. Quigley lived there and knew his way around.

QUIGLEY'S OLD HOME

They broke into a suit pressing establishment in Brookline st., and got the clothing which they were trying on when Mrs. Coleridge saw them. While in the shop they had parked the stolen automobile in front of her house. Quigley used to live on the same street.

A mother's broken heart and a long extension of their prison terms is the only result to their dash for freedom, in the wake of which a prison wall guard was manhandled and clubbed.

Quigley's mother visited him at Cambridge police headquarters soon after his capture and pointed out to him how grief because he had failed to be a good prisoner.

"I wanted you to be good, so they'd let you out sooner," she moaned, and then kissing his hand through the bars, she fainted.

PLENTY TROUBLE AHEAD

The three officers who captured the youths—Sgt. William A. Curtin, and Patrolmen John O'Brien and William Anderson—took them handcuffed to East Cambridge district court this forenoon for arraignment on charges of stealing an automobile, breaking and entering the clothing shop and larceny of clothing, and possession of fire arms.

Both youths were haggard and weary. They sat in the prisoners' dock, looking neither to the right nor the left, while Judge Arthur P. Stone declined jurisdiction and handed them into the custody of Warden James L. Hogsett of State Prison.

Warden Hogsett was accompanied only by a single guard and he did not handcuff the youths as he marched them out of the courthouse and placed them in an automobile. It was a taxicab from Charlestown—and it made both men smile nervously.

The cab whisked them over Prison Point bridge, from which they could see the railroad yards across which yesterday afternoon shortly after 3 o'clock they made their daring dash, after going over the prison wall.

19 WILD HOURS, THAT'S ALL.

They were back in prison at 10 o'clock, less than 19 hours after they had made their break for liberty.

"One break won't change the whole routine of the prison," said Warren Hogsett. "Of course there may be a few changes and an investigation.

"Gilpatrick's a bad actor. The other fellow's only been in a little over a month and I don't know much about him. They won't be severely punished. We'll go to court about that. But they'll have to keep away from other prisoners for a while."

Quigley is serving nine to 15 years for manslaughter in an auto case, a girl and youth having been killed while riding with him in Arlington in a stolen machine.

GUARD'S CASE PENDING

Quigley is 21 and Gilpatrick 29. The latter lived in Revere and is serving six to ten years for armed robbery.

Besides facing punishment for their escape, the two must also face the charge of assaulting Prison Guard John M. Hannon.

Moreover, Dist. Atty. Bishop will seek to indict them for all offenses committed during the night in Cambridge, so that they may be punished for these. Bishop commended the arresting officers.

A girl, whose testimony was instrumental in convicting Quigley, and a Revere man who testified against Gilpatrick, were being guarded against possible injury at the hands of the two escaped convicts, but this ceased when their capture was accomplished.

First news that the escaped men were in Cambrid,e came through the report of an 18-year-old youth to the Central sq. station that he had seen two men breaking into a cleanser's shop at 396 Brookline st., Cambridge, shortly after 1 a. m.

A detail of officers were rushed to the scene and surrounded the building. They entered the shop but found the men had escaped after looting the place. They had gained entry by forcing a rear window.

BUILDING SURROUNDED

About half an hour later the message from the woman came over the wire to Patrolman Manuel Melo at Cambridge headquarters. He notified Sergt. William Curtin in the Central sq. station and Curtin with Patrolmen William Anderson and John O'Brien sped to Henry st. in a police car.

They stopped directly in back of the parked car and the two patrolmen leaped to the front seat, where Gilpatrick was seated. He made a move to seize the loaded .38 calibre automatic, stolen from the prison, in the seat beside him, but O'Brien stuck his gun in his ribs while Anderson's revolver was directed at the convict's head.

TOLD TO KEEP QUIET

"Make a move," said O'Brien, "and we'll blow you apart."

At the same time Sergt. Curtin covered Quigley, who was still changing his clothes in the rear seat. The officers pulled both men from the car. They found in addition to the gun, about a dozen convicts suits, a suitcase, shirts, a cleaning machine, and odd trousers and coats. They had all been stolen from the cleansing shop, police say.

MEDFORD MAN HAPPY NOW

The stolen car was owned by Frank P. Connor of Myrtle st., Medford, who had parked it in Stone ave, Cambridge. He had left his jacket and hat in it and went to Cambridge headquarters today to claim all his belongings.

Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge and Police Chief John J. McBride voiced high praise for Sergt. Curtin and Patrolmen Anderson and O'Brien, calling the'r work one of the finest examples of police duty ever performed in the city.

"I hope the people will appreciate the risk that these three men took in their capture of these two armed convicts," said Chief McBride.

GUISEPPE ROMEO OFFICER C. D. LUCAS

Guiseppe Romeo, of Chicago, was in a fair spot to collect $3000 from Michael Mazar, of Dorchester, today until Traffic Officer C. D. Lucas stepped into the picture and arrested him on a charge of attempted larceny. An alert bank clerk to whom Mazur told a story of drawing the money to turn over to Romeo, suspected a swindle. He called police and the arrest followed. (Staff photo.)

ALERT CLERK SAVES CASH

A smart bank clerk, confidant of a depositor, engineered the arrest of an alleged confidence man at Pearl and High sts., after the depositor sought to draw $3000, "to show he was honest."

The depositor, Michael Mazur, of Moody st., Dorchester, told police he was approached by a man near the South Station and his new friend told the old story of getting $26,000 from the death of his brother.

He was worried about the money, Mazur said he told him and wanted Mazur to care for it.

Mazur went to the Atlantic National Bank and when a clerk heard his story he summoned a detective who, in turn, brought Traffic Officer Chester D. Lucas to the meeting place.

The man appeared with an alleged confederate and was arrested. The confederate escaped. At police headquarters he was hooked as Guiseppe Romeo, Michigan ave., Chicago. Police held him on suspicion of attempted larceny.

Film Star's Mother to Fly to Her Bedside

New York, July 30—Barbara Bennett, wife of Morton Downey, the radio tenor, and her mother, Mrs. Adrienne Morrison, will fly from Newark, N. J., airport today to Hollywood to the bedside of Joan Bennett, screen star, who was thrown from a horse during the filming of a picture.

The mother and sister of the stricken actress decided on the trip upon learning that Joan's injuries included a fractured hip which it was feared might develop seriously.

Aboard Submarine Nautilus, en route to Bergen, Norway, July 30.—Except slight trouble from our exhaust valves leaking—now remedied—the Nautilus made a splendid run yesterday, the second day out of Devonport on the second preliminary stage of our voyage to the North Pole. We hope to reach Bergen Saturday.

We passed Dover at 9 a. m. Greenwich mean time (5 a. m. eastern daylight time). Dover's white cliffs stood out boldly two miles away, and we could see the coast of France on our other side. The weather has been clear and exceptionally calm since we left Devonport, but it is blowing up. At 6 p. m. the bright sunshine left us and it is now misty with rain at times.

We averaged twelve knots in the calm sea, but the Nautilus slowed up as the sea got higher. The total distance covered at nightfall from Eddystone Light was 300 miles.

All our crew is busy with one thing or another. We do not expect to submerge until reaching Bergen, although with the fourteen cylinders of oxygen and 300 pounds of lime aboard we could remain under the water for four days, if it were found necessary.

COSMOPOLITAN POLICY STANDS

New York, July 30 (US)—John R. Hearst, general manager of Cosmopolitan Magazine, announced today that, in the appointment of Harry Payne Burton as editor, effective Oct. 1, there will be no change in Cosmopolitan editorial policy.

"We will continue," said Mr. Hearst, "to spare no expense, effort, care, thought, time and attention to get and to print exclusively what is universally recognized as the best in fiction, features and art throughout the world."

In the selection of Mr. Burton as the new editor of Cosmopolitan, the Hearst management has called on one already experienced as a Hearst editor. After withdrawing from the editorship of McCall's Magazine, Mr. Burton, who has been editor of Physical Culture and consulting editor of Liberty, served for a considerable period as editor of Hearst newspaper fiction.

He is noted for his contacts with brilliant authors and for his ability to get them to bring him their best work.

Convict Slain by Another With Bar

Joliet, Ill., July 30 (US)—A Negro convict n., the old state prison here killed a fellow convict, also a Negro, by striking him over the head with an iron bar and pitching him over the rail on the fifth tier in the west cell house.

The dead man was Joseph Green from Chicago. His assailant, Eugene Blunt, of Chicago, was put in solitary and probably will be charged with murder. He refused to say where he got the iron bar.

Strong Stuff—Well, It Ate Hole in Hard Concrete Floor!

Haverhill, July 30—Some of the bootleg liquor seized by police is the next thing to dynamite and should kill a whole regiment of drinkers if they swallowed a couple of doses of it, according to officers who inspected its work in almost destroying a cement floor in one part of the station.

A keg of the highly potent liquor which was being removed with a lot of other seized goods by state officers leaked on the concrete and also on a wood floor.

A few hours later Officer Albert Houle discovered the liquor had eaten into the concrete and had consumed a big slice of the wood in another part of the station.

"Legs" Lieutenant's Defense Is an Alibi

Catskill, N. Y., July 30 (US)—The defense that won freedom for his boss, Jack ("Legs") Diamond in his torture trial at Troy two weeks ago will be adopted by John ("Iron-Fist") Scacchio, the latter's counsel revealed as Scaccho was placed on trial.

GOOD BIG MAN NOT ALWAYS THE BEST

Extensive tests by the public health service point in that direction anyway, with nearly 500 men, between 20 and 34 years old, as subjects.

Tentatively, the ideal weight for strength and endurance was found to be between 160 and 170 pounds.

Over 170, the tests showed erratic results, with increases in one phase offset by losses in others.

As an example, pulling strength in the 160 to 170 pounders averaged 96.9 pounds, but dropped to 91 in the 180-189 group, while lifting capacity rose between 180 and 1190.

The greatest strength in all capacities was found in men between 27 and 28 inches tall.

Strength was shown to increase up to 30 years of age, remain fairly constant until 50, then a decline began.

Police in Drive on Bronx Speakeasies

New York, July 30—Squads of prohibition agents raided speakeasies and restaurants in the Bronx, confiscated approximately 165 barrels of alleged beer and 75 gallons of liquor and arrested 19 men.

The raids were part of the police drive against speakeasies throughout Greater New York, police said.

Uncle Sam's Troops Aren't So Big on Waistline

The War Department announced today that, for the first time since there was any American army, cartridge belts are to be issued in two sizes.

Man Will Succeed Ousted Woman Judge

New York, July 30—Passing over at least six women candidates for the post of city magistrate in vacant by the removal of Mrs. Jes H. Norris, Mayor Walker disclosed that he had sent the name of man candidate to the New Yor County Bar Association for its dorsement.

He said he had sent the name the man to the bar association b cause the individual was one whom he had long wished to promote.

RADIO PICTURES TO EXPOSE TRICK PHOTOGRAPHY IN AIR FILM

"The Lost Squadron" to Reveal How Plane Crash Scenes Are Made

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, July 30—When either having a tremendous change of heart or someone wants to give the world a thrill, Radio Pictures will expose the trick photography and stunts used in air pictures in "The Lost Squadron." Not since I wrote my first movie column, and that was too long ago to care to remember, have I known any film company to want to expose trick pictures.

Louella O. Parsons

Yet here comes Radio all set to crack forth with the ways and means of filming air wrecks. "The Lost Squadron," by Dick Grace, is the story of an air picture made in a studio with a careful explanation of how it's done.

I am wondering if Radio is smart or foolish. The public loves to be fooled and few people will appreciate seeing how the wheels go round.

Eric von Stroheim will have one of the leading roles. Ricardo Cortes and Mr. Grace will be featured. Dorothy Lee, who is the busiest woman in Hollywood these days, socially I mean, will draw the feminine lead.

One of our local wits called attention to the fact that for the second time in her life Pauline Frederick succeeded Marjorie Rambeau. Marjorie was married to William Mack. Pauline followed her as the next Mrs. M., remaining but a brief time, it's true, but nevertheless, as both women figured in the playwright's life. Then Pauline was called in to take Marjorie Rambeau's place in "The Modern Age." Joan Crawford's picture. Wonder if the two girls met on the lot?

At the swimming clubs, at Malibu Beach and other places where the athletic youth of Hollywood gathers they will tell you that Joel McCrea has the best tan and is the prize athlete of all these girls and boys. A year ago Joel wasn't just so sure what his next job would be. Today there are more jobs than he can possibly fill. He has been borrowed by Paramount for "Once About Town," and was under Radio Pictures is willing to keep him, for the author is Zoe Akins, and how that gal can write. Lilyan Tashman, Kay Francis and Eugene Pallette are the other members of the interesting cast. Mr. and Mrs. Georges Cukor Sunday at Malibu and should really have asked him about this picture, for he is the director, but we were too busy talking about how to get thin.

One thing about working at home in the morning you can wear a bathing suit. If the weather keeps up I look to see Hollywood office forces appearing on the streets in these abbreviated costumes designed for comfort. While I was thinking of the heat I remembered that Frank Donovan has been in the Ozark Mountains making plans for a picture. He will call his epic "The Ozark Ingagi," using all of the natives in his cast. Frank has made over a hundred pictures and every once in a while he hobs up with a brand new idea, even in hot weather. I have heard it whispered that Art Reed, cameraman on Ken Maynard's picture, has fallen a victim to Lina Basquette's charms. Rumors are in a "that way" about her. But Lina, having had one disastrous romance with a cameraman, has not made public the state of her feelings in the matter.

Seen and heard: Monta Bell has confided to a few close friends in the East that he and his wife are separated. A divorce will follow as soon as a financial settlement is agreed upon. The flying Bannisters are getting all ready to take another leap into the air. As soon as Ann Harding finishes "Alias, Mrs. Halifax," she and her husband will fly to Cuba. The King of Siam is movie minded. He wants to take back with him pictures of the Whitelaw Reid estate where he has been visiting in the East and in order to get the color and all he sent to Technicolor for a camera and a cameraman to do the job.

Lunching at the Embassy I saw Janet Gaffis McCormick in a brown sport dress and hat at one table with her grandmother, and John McCormick a few feet away breaking bread at the bachelors' table. Janet goes in Reno to get her freedom from John to whom she was married a scant two months ago. Joan Crawford wearing a new Empress Eugenie hat on blonde hair gave me a surprise. I hadn't seen Joan since she discarded her Italian tresses in favor of peroxide. Florence Ziegfeld from New York to confer with Harry Cohn, also were one of those jaunty Empress Eugenie chapeaux. Florence will head the Columbia scenario department.

The gold-diggers these days haven't a secret, what with the plays, the movies and the books revealing all their best tactics. As soon as Sidney Fox finishes "Strictly Dishonorable" she will be the chief gold-digger in "Nice Women" a Broadway stage play by William S. Grew. 'Tis the tale of a modern girl's battle to land a rich man, and Miss Fox will show via the cinema how to cope with the situation. Cyril Gardner, at one time Corinne Griffith's cutter and specially trained by Lewis Milestone, will direct. We will wait to see what he does. He sounds promising.

Burlesque Revival on the Way With Old Howard Reopening Aug. 22

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

In no branch of theatrical enterprise have the ills of bad business been felt more keenly than in burlesque. The sudden collapse of Mr. I. H. Herk's Mutual Burlesque Association in the early spring made it seem more than probable that this brand of entertainment had taken the final count.

Now, it appears, revival is on the way. Burlesque is not as dead as first reported, merely a little groggy from over production and burdensome overhead. While Mr. Herk's Mutual group is permanently removed from the field, Mr. Herk himself bobs up serenely as proprietor of the New Columbia Burlesque Association and is busying himself these torrid days sending out checks to bold and determined producers. A franchise in the new association, we read, costs $500. According to former standards, this is a bargain price for the privilege of enjoying protected territory.

Nicholas Young

Boston, of course, is included in the new operations. It was only two years ago that three burlesque theaters were vending fun and frolic in these regions; last year the number was reduced to two, and with the permanent withdrawal of the Gayety, only the Old Howard is left for the boys who like to take their song and dance with splashes of nature partially adorned. The Howard will re-open on August 22. What its attraction will be is still unannounced, but we have Fred Doherty's word for it that the show, while snappy, will prove no annoyance to John M. Casey of City Hall.

In talking up the affairs of the New Columbia organization, Mr. Herk returns to a title he so ruthlessly assailed while building up his own Mutual circuit. If Mr. Herk did finally succeed in effacing the old Columbia outfit, he in turn, was taken into camp in lively fashion when business depression—or plain hard times—knocked the props from under his highly and expensively organized Mutual.

If burlesque is not dead, and now we know that it still flickers, the new season will find its operations cautiously conducted. A limit of 25 weeks, instead of 35, will bring about a shorter season.

Davies Film on Orpheum Bill

"Five and Ten," the latest Marion Davies production, which will be seen tomorrow at Loew's Orpheum, is an example of the lavish use of widely diverse talents in the modern, top-flight talking picture. To begin with, the star of the production, Miss Davies, is often called, "the leading comedienne of the screen." Therefore, it is almost axiomatic in the motion picture business: for a great star, a great story.

The greatest story which could be found in this instance, and a story furnishing Miss Davies with many outlets for her use of comedy, pantomime and dramatic acting, was "Five and Ten," the famous novel by Fanny Hurst, the world's most highly-paid short story writer.

It has almost become a tradition that Marion Davies always selects a new leading man for each new picture. In this case, Leslie Howard, who had just finished his part in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Never the Twain Shall Meet," and who is famous on Broadway as an actor-playwright, was selected for the male lead opposite the star.

Irene Rich, who can always be counted upon for a smooth and capable performance, was assigned to play Jenny Rarick, Miss Davies' mother in "Five and Ten." Richard Bennett, pioneer leading man in the silent pictures and one of the greatest character actors of the generation, was selected to appear as John Rarick, the five-and-ten magnate.

Film Who's Who

Marie Dressler, at Loew's State tomorrow in her first starring picture, "Politics," was born at Coburg, Canada, the daughter of Alexander and Anna Hender a on Koerber, the former one of the last surviving officers of the Crimean War and the latter a celebrated musician. She started her theatrical career in the chorus and Koerber, the eventually became one of Broadway's leading entertainers, appearing with Lillian Russell and Weber and Fields. One of her greatest successes was "Tillie's Punctured Romance," which afterward served as her first screen vehicle as well as winning Charlie Chaplin considerable notice. She scored outstanding character portrayals in "Anna Christie," "Let Us Be Gay" and "Min and Bill."

Marie Dressler

Exeter Theater

Clive Brook in "The Lawyer's Secret" and Sheets Gallagher in "Up Pops the Devil," also a Burton Holmes' Travelogue, will be seen at the Exeter for the remainder of the week.

Emma Ainslee Soloist Tonight

Emma Ainslee, Boston contralto, will be the soloist at tonight's free concert of the People's Symphony Orchestra, under Will Dodge, at Brookline Field. She will substitute for Reginald Boardman, pianist. Miss Ainslee will sing the aria "Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix," from Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah."

Miss Ainslee is a singer of wide experience and reputation as church singer, soloist and concert and operatic artist. She has appeared with such organizations as the old English Opera Company, under the baton of Mollenhauer, Nelson and others. For many years, in addition, she has occupied a prominent position as teacher.

The Brookline Chamber of Commerce, which has arranged the series of concerts, has made arrangements for free bus service between the Cypress st. carbarns and Brookline Field, from 7:30 until 8:45, and at the close of each concert. Another innovation to the series is descriptive and analytical remarks about each piece on the program before its performance. These short talks are made by Moses Smith, music critic of the Boston Evening American.

March, "Pomp and Circumstance," Elgar
Suite from the Ballet, "Sylvia," Delibes
Venu Phoni, Pas de Trois
(Soloist, Emma Ainslee, contralto)
Selections from "A Connecticut Yankee" ..... Rodgers

'Common Law' Held Over

Constance Bennett's, "The Common Law," at RKO Keith's, will be held over at that theater for a second week.

The story is about an artist's model with advanced ideas, and about a man who is modern in everything but love.

FAMILIES OF FLIERS ARE OVERJOYED

Mrs. Boardman, wife of the pilot, reached at their summer home in Mattapoisett, was overjoyed at learning of her husband's safe arrival in Instanbul.

Told that the fliers had set their monoplane Cape Cod down exactly at their destination, thereby achieving a new world's record for a non-refuelling distance flight of 6950 miles, she said:

"Isn't that wonderful. I'm so terribly happy I'm really too happy to talk. Our two-year-old daughter, Jane, is out on the beach, asking where her daddy is and now I'll be able to tell her.

"I listened at the radio until after midnight, but there was no word of Russell and John Polando. I didn't lose hope, however, I knew they would make it. I'm really too overjoyed to say any more."

Miss Alice M. Boardman, one of the six pilot's three sisters, who are all staying at Mattapoisett, was also excited.

"It's wonderful; it's marvelous," she exclaimed on hearing the news. Yesterday, she had expressed confidence the flight would be a complete success.

Boardman's two other sisters are Claire and Blanche, the latter the wife of a Washington newspaperman.

MRS. POLANDO IN TEARS

When the American broke the good news at the Polando home, 5 Forest ave., Lynn, joy reigned. Mrs. Polando, mother of the flier, burst into hysterical tears, and then danced through the house, despite her 68 years.

"God had something to do with this," she said through her tears. "I knew last night and while I lay in bed for a few hours this morning that my prayers and the prayers of all of us would help John and Mr. Boardman.

"Of course I was worried when I didn't hear a word from them since the minute they flew away, but you can't show that kind of stuff, and I want to tell you we had great faith.

"I feel only 35 today, and if you don't believe it just look at me. Really, I'm 50 and several times since John left I've felt two or three times that age. It all just seems too wonderful this morning.

"Last night at 11 o'clock, when the news was broadcast, there was no word of my boy or Russell Boardman, although the other plane was reported landed.

"There was still no word when I called newspaper offices at midnight, but I didn't give up hope because Johnny was always a good careful boy, and I had complete confidence in him."

REST OF FAMILY HAPPY

Miss Alberta Polando, 23, one of John's sisters, said she lacked words to describe the joy in the Polando home.

"We all huddled around the radio until early this morning," she said, "and then went to bed. I didn't sleep and I don't think anybody else did."

The other members of the family are a second sister, Mrs. Violet Palamini, 25; a brother, Leo, 27, who live at home and two brothers in Detroit, George 30 and Francis 35. Their father is dead.

The family awaited the return from New York of John's wife, Mrs. Mildred Polando, who witnessed the takeoff.

John, Jr., 5, is staying with her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. George Reynolds at 22 Glendale ave., Peabody. An uncle told him about the flight and the boy informed visitors throughout the day that "Daddy's down Turkey."

Regardless of action by the city of Lynn to honor Polando, his family will see he and his partner are well entertained.

The Polando clan is already preparing a big party for the "Jockey Pilot" as he is called. Polando weighs only 130 pounds and is below medium height.

Polando's employer, Frederick Lothrop Ames, president of the East Coast Aircraft Corp., expressed much pleasure over the accomplishment of the local fliers. He declared that Polando can have his job back any time he wants it.

The success of the hop to Turkey marks the end of more than a year of attempts on the part of Boardman and Polando to make the flight.

A series of mishaps held them back, and in October of last year Boardman was forced to relinquish one attempt after his plane was damaged by fire at Boston airport.

The craft, a Bellanca monoplane, originally named the American Legion, was to have made the hop under the auspices of that organization. After the fire Boardman had it rebuilt and it became the Cape Cod.

Its owner learned to fly after the war, having been a wing-walker, parachute jumper and plane changer, making one of the first changes from plane to plane in this section.

—with—

May Christie

During the vacation of Betty Alden, her daily column, "Beacon Hill," will be replaced by this column of interesting New York society and literary gossip by May Christie, famous English writer, now living in the metropolis and writing of her experiences there.

EAST HAMPTON, L. I., July 30—I have fallen in love with East Hampton.

Also with the friendliness and hospitality of its summer colonists.

You simply couldn't imagine a prettier place. When the Young Man Who . . . and I arrived last Saturday evening around 6 p. m. driving round ye olde village Greene in the centre of "township," it really thought we were in dear old England.

May Christie

Yes, it's terribly delightfully English.

Enormous elms. . .heaps of them, centuries old. . .cast pleasant shade and there's a shiny lake in the heart of East Hampton that lends an atmosphere excessively rural. . .the greenness too. . .that clear and heavenly rain-washed green you seldom see in the usually dusty, foggy days at the end of July. . .why except for the dee-vine weather (the sun shines all day long) we might be in the heart of an English April . . .

An English Scene

Brown-roofed cottages (they are really quite large houses, staffed by plenty of servants). . .secluded by hedges in ye well-knowne English manner. . .peep coyly out of a little green world. Their architecture is of old Albion, too. . .low. . .rambling. . .lattice-windowed. . .and much gabled. And—can you imagine this? . . .and what a thrill I had when I discovered it. . .right back of me as I write this little chronicle and no more than 50 yards away, is none other than "Home Sweet Home."

It's a darling old house of mellow brown with a roof that billows downward on one side almost to the ground. . .an ideal spot for the children to toboggan on. . .I'll bet they did. . .Those happy children who lived there long ago when "Home Sweet Home" was written. . .

A lump came to my throat and tears to my eyes when I looked up at those tiny lattice-windows high among the tree-tops, where "little birds singing gaily that came at my call" must have brought happy little faces to those tiny casements many an early morning . . .

And children must have climbed in the branches of those huge old elms that shade this quaint little house that is known as the emblem of love and peace and happiness all the world over . . .

In the tangle of garden where those children played, there is an old, brown wind mill. It's sails are now at peace, spread out as though in blessing on the loving hearts that once lived there . . .

I write this in a very old-world, low-roofed room with white wall and ceiling, an elm peeps in at my window, too. Birds sing there and below is an old-fashioned garden. It is big and square, with an eight-foot hedge and it blazes with old-fashioned flowers, red, pink, white, orange and golden. My room is full of flowers . . . Tall, salmon-colored irises . . . Yellow hollyhocks . . . Carnations . . . Flaunting dahlias of a deep red . . . And the modest pink of sweet williams . . . They were plucked from the gardens of her home, Adams' Cottage, yesterday, by Miss Frances Dana Hyde, when the sun was setting.

* * *

She stopped her car en route from a late afternoon party-by-the-swimming-pool at the lovely Fullerton Weaver home, "Meadow Cliff," where we had all been enjoying ourselves. Miss Frances Hyde is a bright and lively girl. Brunette. . . And very popular. She was in a grey ensemble . . . The orange caught by a brooch or clasp that is a tiny watch set round with diamonds.

When we arrived at the estate of Major and Mrs. Fullerton Weaver (he is the famous architect who designed the new Waldorf-Astoria, did you know?) we found a merry crowd, some little distance from the house, down by the swimming pool.

Whose waters are a cerulean blue. The tiling the color of the waters around the island of Capri. In July. . . tall, good looking young man. . . Spencer F. Weaver, Jr. . . . received us. That handsome artist, Mr. Russell Patterson was sitting on an old stone bench, tranquil and cool in a white linen suit. His pretty, tri-haired wife, Mrs. Constance [illegible]son was very smart in gay red [illegible]

* * *

Romance Hinted

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cantarana, that fascinating couple of Spanish appearance, were sitting happily on the grass, laughing at the continuous flow of wit . . . And, oh, how amusing he is!

Of the popular Charles Flanigan. Mrs. Cantarana's pretty little sister, too, was there . . . Do I scent a romance blooming . . . Catherine Magan, of the gorgeous eyes, wore eau-de-nil and a most original bracelet. Of tiny elephants, in crystal pink jade . . . Jade green. Amber . . . Amethyst. For luck a black cat dangled there also.

Mr. Winnie Gardiner. I chatted with . . . So lazy, I was told, that he wouldn't change his own tie . . . But I don't believe 'am.

When a lovely girl, Miss Fish, was introduced to me by Mr. Spencer Weaver what do you think young Mr. Gardiner murmured? With a wave of his hand, he said: "This is Miss Fish, one of our finny friends . . ." And everybody laughed uproariously.

And yet another was Miss Rosalind Kress, in a sky-blue satin dress. Major Fullerton Weaver's estate is in Old English style . . . Rambling and beautiful. It has a large polo field in front. The swimming pool and lawns and fields are behind the house. And at the left is a formal English rose garden.

Mr. Roland H. Hooker—who has a house down here, and an apartment in the Ritz Tower, Park ave. at 57th st. with his charming mother-in-law, Mrs. Francis Hoblan, took us up to luncheon yesterday at that exclusive spot, the Devon Yacht Club.

Mr. Hooker is the brother of my friend, Princess Meikhor, who is now on her way to Europe. The Devon Yacht Club is an adorable little place.

We lunched on a big square porch that has numerous pillars made out of the trunks of silver birch, branches of oak that are thick with leaves give a further rural aspect.

The club was full of a merry crowd of members yesterday for lunch. Mr. Finn Vernou Bouvier, tall and handsome, beau-brummelish, came over to greet us. He is president of the Sons of the American Revolution and a great favorite at the Devon Yacht Club.

Miss Sally Wambolt served as maid of honor and only bridal attendant and Robeson Bailey was best man. Mr. Rogers gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin, finished with old point lace that had belonged to her great-grandmother. Her veil was of family lace also, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids, gardenia and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was gowned in pale green organdie, and wore a broad-brimmed straw hat en maich, with which she carried a bouquet of mixed flowers.

At the conclusion of the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Owing to the recent death of Mr. Hopkins' stepfather the wedding was very simple.

Do you know that her brother, Mr. Edward F. Harkness, has recently given a sum of ten million dollars to a noted charity in England?

Tomorrow I will tell you of a delightful al fresco luncheon that was given for us today at that fashionable club-on-the-ocean, The Maidalone.

OUT FOR A STROLL ON NORTH SHORE

MRS. PAULTON MISS DENNETT MRS. WOODS

Mrs. Anna Dennett Paulton and her sister, Priscilla A. Dennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl P. Dennett of Boston and Manchester, are shown strolling with Mrs. Joseph F. Woods (Betty Barrell) of Hamilton. They are popular on the North Shore.

Spacious Crane Estate Scene of Affair

On Friday, September 11, a group of sub-debs, debs and post-debs are giving a dance for the benefit of the Children's Hospital. Miss Anne Warren is supposed to be in charge of the arrangements, but she is abroad with her mother, Mrs. Samuel Warren, for the summer months; her sister, Miss Helen Warren, is taking her place.

Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Jr., has offered her large and very attractive summer estate at Ipswich for the affair.

On Committee

Miss Warren is assisted by a group of about 12 or 13 girls, the list including the Misses Madeleine and Beatrice Phillips, daughters of the John C. Phillips of Mt. Vernon st., and Windymere, Wenham; Ann and Emily Dick, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Evans B. Dick of Boston and Pride's Crossing; Alice Ellsworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Ellsworth; Serita Bartlett, daughter of the Mathew Bartletts of Gloucester st. and Beverly Farms; Sally White, daughter of the Laurence Whites of Beverly Farms; Harriet Moseley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Moseley of Beacon st. and Newburyport, Marian Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Clark of Commonwealth ave. and Pride's Crossing, all debutantes of the coming season, except Emily Dick and Beatrice Phillips.

The rest of the list includes the names of both younger and older girls, the younger being the Misses Alice Burrage, daughter of the Russell Burrages of Boston and Beverly Farms; Mary Barbour, daughter of the Thomas Barbours of Brookline and Beverly Farms; Lucy Rantoul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul of Fairfield st. and Beverly Farms; Lily Warren, sister of the two girls in charge; Florence Crane, daughter of Mrs. house is being loaned for the dance; Nancy Shaw, daughter of the Louis Agassis Shaws of Beverly Farms, and Katherine Winthrop, daughter of Mr. Frederick Winthrop of Dartmouth st. and Hamilton.

An older group is represented by Miss Rachel Warner and Miss Cecily Livermore, both of Manchester.

Several dinner parties will be given before the dance, but those will be announced later.

O'Neil's Play

The occasion of the presentation of Eugene O'Neill's lengthy drama, "Strange Interlude," this week at the Cape Playhouse at Dennis, became, by virtue of an unusually high attendance of season subscribers, a focal point for Cape Cod society.

Because of the length of the play, which began necessarily early at five in the afternoon and just until eleven, with an hour and one-half intermission for dinner, the patrons found an opportunity to inspect the flower gardens of Mr. Raymond Moore, the director of the Playhouse.

Lodge Resigns Museum Post

John Ellerton Lodge, since 1915 curator of Asiatic art in the Museum of Fine Arts, has resigned and will give his entire time to his duties as director of the Freer Gallery of Art, Washington.

For several years he has divided his service between the two museums. He has been in charge with the staff of the Museum of Fine Arts since 1913.

In 1923 he was appointed director of the Freer gallery, in which are assembled many of the finest masterpieces of Chinese and Japanese art, together with notable collections of paintings by James McNeill Whistler and other occidental artists. At Washington Mr. Lodge has found the duties of his directorship so heavy that he has decided to give up his curatorship in Boston.

Mr. Lodge, who was born at Nahant, August 1, 1878, is a son of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. Her physicians said there would be no permanent injury.

Miss Rogers Is Hopkins' Bride

Miss Dorothy Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Rogers of 34 Spooner rd., Chestnut Hill, was married to Mark Hopkins, son of Mrs. Stevens Heckscher of Stratford, Pa., yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the First Church of Chestnut Hill, the Rev. Dan Huntington Penn officiating.

Miss Sally Wambolt served as maid of honor and only bridal attendant and Robeson Bailey was best man. Mr. Rogers gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin, finished with old point lace that had belonged to her great-grandmother. Her veil was of family lace also, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids, gardenia and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was gowned in pale green organdie, and wore a broad-brimmed straw hat en maich, with which she carried a bouquet of mixed flowers.

At the conclusion of the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Owing to the recent death of Mr. Hopkins' stepfather the wedding was very simple.

About people you know in Boston Stores

—By FRANCES BAIRD—

When the thermometer read 97 yesterday at 2 o'clock, one-half of the sales force of Shepard's was sent home by Miss Germaine, assistant personnel director for that store, with the approval of John Shepard, 3d, president of the firm. There are more than 1000 employes in this store.

At 3 o'clock the mercury was still climbing, so the remaining sales force was cut in half and only a skeleton staff of about 250 persons remained on duty until the close of business.

STOWELL STAFF SENT HOME

SANDERS RESIGNS

Elmer Sanders, secretary to Frank Black, publicity director for Filene's, has resigned his position to become advertising manager for a mail order house in New York. Mr. Sanders bade his associates farewell yesterday.

James Smith, of the merchandise office staff, has been appointed to replace Sanders as secretary to Mr. Black. He will assume his new duties next Monday.

BOND MANAGER HERE

MISS LYONS IS SECRET BRIDE

Miss Florence Lyons, assistant supervisor at Gilchrist's, was secretly married to Roland Backlund of Cohasset while on her vacation on July 14. The news leaked out upon her return to business this week.

Joan Bennett's Hip and Spine in Cast

Hollywood, Cal., July 30 (AP)—Joan Bennett, screen actress, injured when she was thrown from a horse spent a restless night, but physicians said her condition today showed considerable improvement.

The fractured hip and spine of the actress were placed in a cast.

New Lines for Casual Coat

By ANN ARDEN

TOP COATS this summer are white or so very pastel in coloring that they look like white. The Polo coat has been accepted really to such a great extent that, to some, it grows tiresome.

* * *

A COAT, that excellently shows the new lines that casual coats are taking is full to the point of being bulky looking. The sleeves are wide at the armholes and at the wrists. The waistline is indicated though not necessarily belted. The collar is so arranged that it can be buttoned up tightly about the throat or allowed to swing loosely from the shoulder line.

* * *

THE WELL-TAILORED coat is of fine white wool, unlined, with patch pockets, stitched belt, which may be omitted, and the coat left very loose and swagger, caught three buttons center front. There is a roomy raglan shoulder and wide notched revers and collar.

Children Feted by Kennedys

The largest family representation was that of the four children, Martha, Kathleen, Joan and Thomas Jr., of Thomas Buckner, president of the New York Life Insurance Co., of New York City, and Mrs. Aylette Buckner.

Those who assisted in receiving the children were Mrs. Mabel Leonard of Bennington, Vt., Mrs. Charles Lee of Cincinnati, Mrs. Frederick Rugg and Mrs. High Nawn, Jr., of Brookline, Mrs. Thomas Whelan of Swampscott, Mrs. Buckner, and Miss Ethel Donohue of Hartford.

Boston Man in Paris Wedding

Russell Luce McIntosh of Boston was married today in Paris to Mrs. Mary Lois Kilpatrick Perry, wealthy society leader of St. Louis, Mo., according to dispatches reaching here.

The wedding was featured by two ceremonies, a civil ceremony and a religious ceremony by a Methodist minister at the home of the bride, 4 Avenue Camoens. Only a few close friends of the couple were present.

CHORINE'S KITCHEN CRY; PRESS AGENT'S ART

By Gilbert Seldes

GILBERT SELDES

MARION DODGE HUMBERT GOT A DIvorce because she wanted to do housework and her husband wouldn't let her. The item is without any interest whatever except for the circumstance that Mrs. Humbert used to be a Follies girl. Thus art imitates nature, and life takes its revenge on press agents.

• • •

Proof of Virtue

I know perfectly well how the domestic virtues of chorus girls came to be such a notable item in the repertory of the press agent. They are a hang-over from the days when all men and women connected with the stage were assumed to be im-immoral, and were denied entrance to decent houses when alive and to sacred ground when they died. Obviously, the first time a press agent got a photograph of an actress with a skillet in her hand, he made the papers. It was a novelty and it established the general moral tone of the player because it associated her with the dear simple innocence of the kitchen.

• • •

Good Old Press Agents

Some of my best friends are press agents, and I wouldn't say a word against them, but they are a pretty dull lot. They continue to use the same stories over and over again. The one about the lost jewels is the only one they have a handicap and the reason is that city editors won't print it any more. (Another reason is that burglary isn't news in these times unless it is accompanied by a little high-class racketeering and a few murders.) The press agent not only knows a good story, but keeps on telling it forever.

The modern girl who loves to cook is a survival because two things have changed. In the first place, the respectability of the stage has grown so great that it approaches stodginess on one side and social snobbery on the other. No necessity exists to prove a trouper honest and virtuous; the good story is in the actress who would be willing to confess to at least a little immorality. There is also nothing new in chorines who read good books and go home with mother after every performance. You can read the book and the mother at so much per week.

The Moral-less Kitchen

By far the greater change, though, is in the status of home kitchen. Sewing, darning, cleaning, and all the other domestics were allied with cooking, as proofs of a pure heart, because they were difficult, unpleasant and unrewarding tasks, and also because they left little time and little energy for a gay and somewhat vicious life. They constituted virtue just as the German Kaiser's "Kinder, Kueche, Kirche" constituted the whole duty of a hausfrau. They were good for—who would dream of paying for Righteousness, which springs naturally from the heart?

• • •

No Virtue in Pleasure

Today cooking is either the work of specialists, to whom it should be left, or can be made simple and pleasurable for the amateur. Half of the meals the average small household requires can be made within an hour by the use of proper apparatus, and good organization will attend to cleaning and sewing and the other kindnesses just as simply. I know that this is particularly true of town and city—so do the chorus girls who make the announcements that they are just plain home girls; they are neither plain nor home girls, and they can't tell the daisies from the buttercups.)

• • •

Bargain-Counter Virtue

The virtues of the home are quite separate from the drudgery of the home, and when actresses or other women who marry actors say, as the new Mrs. Vallee said the other day, that they are "home girls" or "homey-loving girls," I never know exactly what they mean or why they are so proud of it. Any girl who is willing to be a home girl of the 1890 sort nowadays shows both laziness and a lack of imagination. If she wants to give the impression that she is willing to slave and labor for her husband, why doesn't she say that she is an office girl, or a bargain-counter-loving girl—since these are the places of toil and hardship? There is grace in the making of a supremely fine omelette, and there is romance in the creation of a sauce Bearnaise, naturally, few. (So are the men.) But the connection between these things and the morals of marriage is not clearly established.

• • •

Another Slapper

Another Chicago item of the day should be bracketed with the New York story of the citizen who slapped a woman because she smoked in public. The rough guy in this case was a patriotman; the victim was a woman; the offense was washing sand off the soles after the beach was closed. In other words, the lady failed to get out of the water fast enough to suit the arm of the law, and the arm had a nightstick at its farther end.

• • •

Acquired Toughness

The men in both these episodes must have been going to the movies lately. At the time I saw "The Public Enemy" I noted that the man in the audience applauded the gangster when he ground a grapefruit into a girl's face. (They laughed with glee in "Smart Money" when the gambler kicked a woman stool-pigeon out of his office—and kicked in that picture, means kicked.) If this influence continues we'll have to have new movies or new women.

• • •

Too Many Orchids

Mrs. Humbert, the Follies girl, had a word to say, incidentally, about her marriage. "I had orchids for breakfast, orchids for luncheon and orchids for dinner. Finally I got tired of it, and . . . we settled financial matters out of court."

After a regime of orchids, it is a wonder there were any financial matters left to solve.

"They still haven't printed my letter."

Dialects

By Gobind B. Lal

"THE SHILLING SHOCKER" is the King's English.

In this Republic, the same thing is known as the "dime novel." So, according to experts in the science of philology, English is English, and American is American.

But that is not all. Now, Professor Hans Kurath, of Ohio State University, lecturing at Columbia University, tells us that it is nonsense to talk of a single American language.

What you really have is an United States of American Dialects. Indeed, the American Council of Learned Societies, at the Fayerweather Hall, Columbia University, has begun a survey of the country to determine and record the various American vernaculars. Then a Linguistic Atlas of America will be prepared and issued.

Professor Kurath and Professor Miles L. Hanley, Wisconsin University entymologist, will begin their research in New England, early in August, collecting data in Connecticut. Dr. Guy Lowman will carry on the survey in Vermont, Cassil Reynard in Plymouth, Massachusetts, and Martin Joos in another part of New England.

Curiously enough, the greatest differences in names occur among kitchen utensils and other household articles. A skillet, frying pan and a spider mean the same thing. A tin cup is also named a dipper, gourd; and a porch may be a veranda or piazza. And everybody is right, according to his climate.

Dr. Kurath says that women are the greatest sticklers for linguistic standards. They are so easily shocked when a radio announcer calls something by, what they think, a wrong name, which may after all be the right name in the announcer's home town.

Longing

So this is May!
'Tis like a score of dreams
Unto my heart.
'Tis like the glow of beams
Near and apart!
O blessed day!
I feel the rushing wild
Deep in my veins;
I hear the swinging mild
Of golden chains!
So dearest, stay!
Stay till the night draws near.
My life is thine,
And drink the failing tear
With lips divine.
For this is May!

When They Write

By Charles Hanson Towne

GETRUDE ATHERTON is in San Francisco, writing her memoirs. She should have a great story to tell, for she has led a cosmopolitan life, both in her own country and in Europe, and has met all sorts and conditions of people.

Charles H. Towne

Like the late Arnold Bennett, Mrs. Atherton is never happy unless she is busy. Often she comes to New York without letting even her publishers know that she is in town. She buries herself away in a quiet hotel, goes out and sees the shops, attends matinees so that she will know what is going on, and then gets to her desk. Once immersed in writing a book, the world is well lost to her.

She finds great cities excellent places in which to accomplish much. Several of her earlier novels were written in Munich, and one or two in London. She went to Butte to write "Perch of the Devil," in order to be in the atmosphere of the characters she was creating; and she once told me that she thought Helena, Montana, an exhilarating city. But when she gets going she can work anywhere.

• • •

How and Where

It is interest to know how and where some authors do their writing.

Rebecca West likes best the impersonality of a hotel room. Nothing distracts her there; but if she means a provincial English inn. I have never found one yet in which I could find much peace of mind.

Those old chromos on the walls, the flowery wallpaper and the ugly furniture would divert me from any work I had to do. But we are all different and creatures of habit.

Anyone who has done newspaper work finds it easy to compose in practically any atmosphere. The late George Barr McCutcheon could write his 1500 words a day—and he kept this pace up regularly for years—in a room filled with people indulging in general conversation. His powers of concentration were limitless.

On the other hand, Booth Tarkington must retire to his workroom upstairs in his Indianapolis home, or in Kennebunkport, and have not less than a dozen lead pencils sharpened and ready before he can write at a long, plain board which he had made for himself.

• • •

Works in an Office

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART, in her autobiography, "My Story," tells how, finally, she was forced to rent a little office in the heart of the business district in Pittsburgh, in order to get away from the distractions of her family.

To avoid canvassers who wander through such buildings, she did not have her name on the door; and in this hidden-away spot she managed to write her plays and novels and short stories at a tremendous rate of speed, and at a tremendous rate per word.

Irvin Cobb has done the same thing in New York. He feels that three hours a day are all that are necessary. The morning hours are best for him; and in the afternoon he browses about the city, not looking for material, necessarily, but getting impressions which may be useful to him later on.

• • •

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE has a little garret in the old section of Paris in the rue Servandoni. It is literally a seventh-story heaven, and he has to climb all those stairs before he can reach his desk. Once there, he has no temptation to go down into the streets again until his day's work is done. He can look out over the tangled roofs of the town, and dream his dreams.

Yet I can remember when he wrote on a roof garden in the heart of New York. His earliest books, of course, were written in Chiddingfold, in Surrey; and "The Love Letters of the King" was composed in an old castle in Denmark, facing a sea that was forever stormy.

Edna Ferber has a pent-house in Manhattan, and never answers the telephone until after one o'clock. She shuts herself away completely; but I have known her to work just as hard at her typewriter in a Chicago hotel. She once was a reporter on a Milwaukee newspaper, and that early training has stood her in good stead. When a book is finished she immediately goes to Europe.

• • •

The Greatest Pests

LOUIS BROMFIELD deserted New York long ago for the south of France; but in the winter he goes to Paris and takes an apartment where he can work quite as well. Not a word of his "Twenty-Four Hours" was written in New York, though the scenes of the story were laid in our Murray Hill and Sutton pl. sections.

Somerset Maugham has a villa near Antibes, and woe betide anyone who interrupts him before luncheon. He keeps innumerable notebooks, filled with plots. He told me that he had at least 40 unwritten stories tucked away, and the scenarios of two novels and a play completely mapped out.

CURRENT RADIO BITS

News of Well Known Air Stars

There's a plentiful platter filled with strictly fresh radio hash to be served today. Helpings will not be referred to as right off the griddle, or otherwise made unwelcome for reasons climatic.

• • •

Perspiration, notwithstanding, piping hot news comes in the form of advices telling how Rudy Valles is seriously considering an everlasting discontinuance of his crooning on the air. As may be naturally surmised, the newly acquired bride and helpmate would have it so. Her cherished desire is to gaze upon Rudy comfortably seated, with his feet under (or on top of) an executive desk.

• • •

ALAS AND ALACK!

Next in line for treatment is one Charles "Buddy" Rogers, whose graceful physique and mannerisms were recently reported as about to become fixed on the leader's pedestal; directing a New York hotel orchestra playing on the air waves while Rogers became famous crooning, or whatever it was the bosses had in mind for him to do. Hollywood feels there are better things and greater plaudits awaiting Buddy as a screen star. Consequently he signed a new contract for the flickers and said "thank you" rather than cut cards with fate as a broadcasting musicker. So much for that.

• • •

Perhaps a scant notice on this page some weeks ago will be remembered for its reference to a fellow without scruples where secrets are concerned. Walter Winchell, that's him, and guess what? He's being featured by Columbia with Ruth Etting, beginning September 15—the sissy.

• • •

CONSOLING

Though it is probably well known, it may not be, so a reminder. Ann Leaf goes vacationing Saturday with little sister, Esther, on East from Omaha to console ear cuppers by taking Ann's turn at the console. Strange how that word console applies two ways.

• • •

There are 12 bass horn and bull fiddle players in four big New York studios, all answering the name of Weber. Each of them is with a different orchestra. Now, please remember no ad is under obligation to accept this report, but upon investigation they were found to be brothers.

• • •

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

With John Polandon and Russell Bonsdman down from the clouds in Turkey, following the longest non-stop flight record in history (8626 miles) it will be interesting to see how fast the big radio couple garner their voices back across those miles. No previous arrangement was made for them to be short wave it, yet here is a real chance for some showmanship of the Barnum brand that will be as welcome as any broadcast ever to crowd the waves.

• • •

Utterance of the word jazz among hors toofers in radioland is taboo. A sort of unwritten law finds the law term practically extinct. Its use borders on the sacrilegious. Such terms as novelty, modern and dance rhythm are applied to the tuneful variety of tempo in vogue.

GUESTS FROM WASHINGTON

Radio officialdom has come to Boston on matters of import. Paul Spearman, assistant general counsel for the Federal Radio Commission, is basking in our warm summer sun, incidentally pressing a few cases in our courts. Paying WNAC a courtesy call, he expressed keen interest in the new short wave antenna tower with which Shepard engineers and general staff members are so pleased.

• • •

Sooner or later it had to come. Ed Young, the Yankee Philosopher heard on WAAB, is having negotiations for a sponsored enviable spot on the waves. One of the big temples hereabouts seeks to do business with Ed and he's still listenin.

SOMEBODY'S WRONG

Absolutely no truth attends the rumor that WOR of Newark is being sought by a syndicate for the purpose of getting a new network under way, at least the head man there says it's surely manufactured chatter. The urgent request last such whispering he vigorously denied in print seems to make his side of the story ring true.

That's all the hash for today, served without poetry. Some day when mewg is scarce, a helping of poetry will adorn our menu, just to please those who might like radio rhymes.

EXTRA!!
A radio scoop occurred this morning at 8:40 a. m. George Warren, on the early operators shift at WAAB, switched controls to The Globe Trotter at the Boston Evening American. Word of Russell Boardman and John Polando landing at Istanbul, Turkey, was given to New England an hour before any other radio station transmitted the flash.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

SPEAKEASY

Under ordinary conditions speakeasy windows are kept shut and heavily barred. But such has been the weather these past few days that even these cases in a desert of aridity have suffered. Thus it was, I suppose, that a beleaguered bartender in one of our better known "speaks" reached the limit of his endurance the other night and decided in desperation to throw open the windows and thus invite any vagrant breeze to make him a call.

This old snooper happened to be walking along the street at the exact moment the bartender opened the windows. Attracted by the sound of heavy bolts being thrown back, I looked up and saw the windows being raised. Now, it happened that a policeman was walking toward me at the moment and the thought flashes in my mind:

"Oh, oh! Here it comes. The cop will look up, see the place, and either make the arrest himself or send for a squad from the station house."

I slowed up, curious to see what was going to happen . . .

The cop came strolling along, looked up at the bartender in the window, waved his arm and called:

"Hi, there, Charlie! S'dam hot, ain't it?" . . .

And Charlie waved back and said:

"Yep. You said it, Johnny, ol' boy. Glad I ain't got your job tonight."

• • •

In another of our speakeasies—an emporium where (to prove that hooting ain't dead) CAN have a sign of humor) a life preserver with the legend, "KEPTUNE A. A." painted on it hangs over the bar. The proprietor got big hearted a while ago and placed a huge bowl filled with pretzels on one corner of the bar for his customers to nibble on . . . It didn't work out very well, though, because in the case of three short hours one Sunday night and another customer named $3.30 worth of pretzels . . . The boss made some rapid calculations and figured out how much it would cost him to supply pretzels in a 12-hour day if they cost him $3.30 in those hours . . . The pretzel bowl disappeared forthwith.

• • •

You see a lot of funny sights in speakeasies, too. For instance, last night there was a chap standing at the bar, sipping gin and at the same time serenely munching on a vanilla ice cream cone. . . The gentleman of this particular den of iniquity, incidentally, looks so much like Frank Baron, the star of "Lightnin'," that it was with difficulty that I restrained myself from walking up to him and saying:

"Say, Bill, tell us about that time you drove a herd of bees across the western plains."

• • •

One of the customers at the bar was beginning to get boisterous and the bartender, in his infinite wisdom, refused to serve him any more drinks. The chap argued for a few minutes but in vain, and then, seeing it was useless, threw down his coat off, he walked up to us:

"Are you connected with this establishment?" he inquired politely.

"No," we replied, "but to save you further trouble, I will tell you that when this particular bartender says he won't sell you any more, he means it."

Then our friend became confidential:

"Huh," he sniffed. "I could have anything in this place if I told them who I am. I'm expecting to hear that, at the very least, he was a senator or something, we asked, "Who are you?"

"Shhh!" he cautioned us, and looked around carefully to be sure no one was listening. "I'm Lois Wilson's brother."

• • •

Dear Al:

If you are going "nautical" why don't you do it in the right manner? The fleet of ships called the "Palmers" were all of the schooner rig and not square rigged as you said in your column.

JOHN E. SULLIVAN.

Sorry, old pal, but all we ever knew about seamanship is what we learned on the swan boats.

ITALIAN POLICE, DISGUISED, ON KILLER'S TRAIL

New York, July 30 (AP)—Fifty Italian policemen, disguised as workmen or men-about-town, strolled the streets of Harlem's "Little Italy" today, their ears open for a clue to the child slaying on Tuesday.

The police department, urged on by an aroused citizenry and newspaper rewards totaling $15,000, sent every available man to ferret out each minute clue that might lead to the gunmen who took the life of one child and sent four others to the hospital in trying to shoot down an intended victim, a still unidentified man.

Detectives are hampered by the reticence of a grief-stricken Sicilian community, yet they doggedly kept on, bringing in suspects and checking the motor vehicle bureau files for owners of green touring cars. It was a green car that drew up to the curbing at E. 107th st. and from which the front of the Heimar club, a poolroom, was sprayed with gun slugs.

Harry Bruno, described by Commissioner Mulrooney as an "honest truckman," was brought in for questioning last night, when an anonymous tipster furnished police with the number of the gun car. The commissioner absolved Bruno of connection with the shooting.

Dolar Must Buy More, Says Beedy

Norway, Me., July 30 (AP)—Cong. Carroll L. Beedy addressing the Kiwanis clubs here today, said business depression would continue until buying power of the dollar is raised to that of 1922 to 1929.

"American business men are merchandising products today at a price that brings no profits," he said. "We cannot emerge from this world-wide depression until commodity prices are increased to the point where they will yield a profit. This is but another way of saying we shall not emerge from the present depression until the purchasing power of the American dollar is brought back to the level that obtained between the years 1923 and 1929."

U. S. BOY FACING FIRING SQUAD IN MEXICO

Chihuahua, Mexico, July 30 (INS)—Bets are even in "murderers' row" of ancient and turreted Chihuahua prison here on the chances of W. J. Meers, an American youth, escaping the firing squad. The state courts of Chihuahua seldom have pronounced the death penalty on convicted murderers and never yet have failed to select at the last moment, but opinion around the prison is that the firing squad has never loomed so threateningly close as in Meers' case.

Meers himself, content with his lot after a year in "murderers' row" along with some 50 killers or similar bad hombres, is certain that the appeal on his case now pending will bring commutation of the death sentence.

A sentence of 20 years ordinarily replaces the extreme penalty.

Meers is 28 years old. He hails from Texas.

When a Mexican shot and killed his father seven years ago, Meers carried on a silent but tireless manhunt and eventually spotted the man he thought had killed his father. He shot him dead, only to discover that it was the wrong man.

Noted Flier Is Killed in France

Berre, France, July 30 (AP)—Lieut. Bougault, one of the best of the post-war aviators in France, was killed today while testing a new plane which was to have been entered in the Schneider Cup races.

The propeller broke while the ship was in the air and it crashed in a pond.

IRISH HAVE FIRE READY FOR ALL "BAD" BOOKS

Dublin, July 30 (INS)—Thousands of books by famous authors, including George Bernard Shaw, Edgar Wallace, Sinclair Lewis, Michael Arlen and Ethel M. Dell, feed the flames of one of the strangest fires in the world which is kept alight in Dublin. Even many of Shakespeare's famous plays are thrown on the bonfire.

The "stokers" are Free State government officials. The fire is the state incinerator used for the destruction of books seized under the strict censorship now in force in Ireland.

There are now over a hundred famous books—many of them American sellers—which are banned by the Irish Free State.

Books written by Sinclair Lewis, Marie Stopes, Rosita Forbes, Thomas Wolfe, John Van Druten, William Gerhardi or Sherwood Anderson, are destroyed on sight.

A close watch is being kept on all consignments of books sent into the country.

If a novel by a banned author is discovered in a parcel the authorities seize the lot, irrespective of their titles, and they are immediately destroyed.

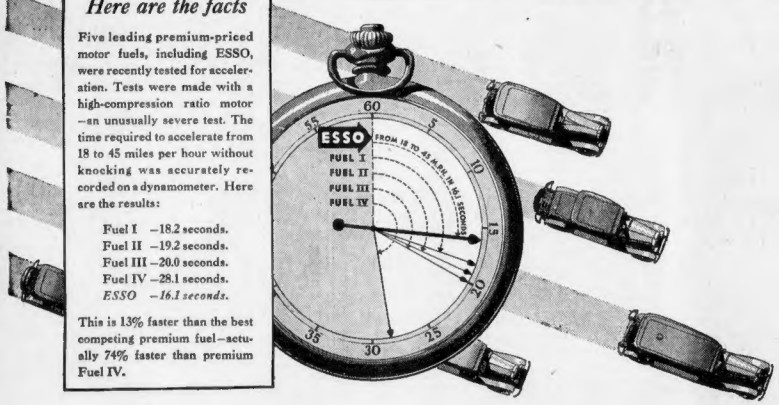
13 to 74% Faster Acceleration

Here are the facts

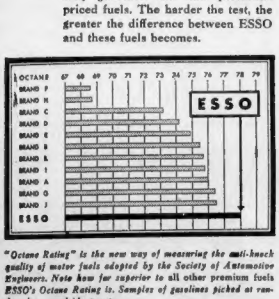
Five leading premium-priced motor fuels, including ESSO, were recently tested for acceleration. Tests were made with a high-compression ratio motor—an unusually severe test. The time required to accelerate from 18 to 45 miles per hour without knocking was accurately recorded on a dynamometer. Here are the results:

Fuel I —18.2 seconds.
Fuel II —19.2 seconds.
Fuel III —20.0 seconds.
Fuel IV —28.1 seconds.
ESSO —16.1 seconds.

This is 13% faster than the best competing premium fuel—actually 74% faster than premium Fuel IV.



Read the report above. Bear in mind that this test was made not with ordinary gasolines but with premium-priced fuels. The harder the test, the greater the difference between ESSO and these fuels becomes.



"Octane Rating" is the new way of measuring the anti-knock quality of motor fuels adopted by the Society of Automotive Engineers. Note how far superior to all other premium fuels ESSO's Octane Rating is. Samples of gasolines picked at random from roadside pumps.

No wonder motorists who try ESSO notice how different it is from any gasoline they have ever used!

This is particularly true of modern high-compression cars, of course. But in any car, regardless of age or type, there is a decidedly different "feel," a different type of performance, when you drive with ESSO.

ESSO represents a radical advance in motor fuel. It contains Ethyl, but it is more than an Ethyl gasoline. It was especially developed to deliver maximum power from the modern motor. ESSO's success has been instantaneous. Already its use has spread from America to 20 foreign countries. In some sections today more ESSO is sold than any other brand of gasoline, regardless of price.

Make a 10-day test in your own car and notice the difference ESSO makes under all conditions.

TWO OF FIVE IDENTIFIED IN JEWEL ROBBERY

THIS IS LIFE

NOTHING NEW—GANDHI'S CREED GOES BACK INTO THE AGES

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

THE NEW DECALOGUE OF MAHATMA GANDHI, THE publication of which was about the most interesting news in the Sunday papers, does not, of course, pretend to be anything but his own rules as he has formulated them for his own living. "They are," he said, "the lamp-posts guiding me through life's pathway (sic), and they have guided numberless (sic) of my co-workers." The English is dreadful, whether it be that of Gandhi himself or of some anonymous A. P. correspondent, but the meaning is clear enough. Here they are:

1—Truth.
2—Ahimsa, which may be translated into English as love.
3—Brahmacharya, which may be inadequately expressed as chastity.
4—Restraint of the palate, which he elaborates as eating for the mere sustenance of the body, abstaining from intoxicating drinks and drugs such as opium and tobacco.
5—Abstaining from the possession of things for oneself.
6—Adherence to life's law that one's bread must be earned by the sweat of one's brow.
7—Swadeshi, the belief that man's primary duty is to serve his neighbor.
8—Belief in the equality of all mankind.
10—Fearlessness.

Creed of Belief Lacking

Gandhi is reported to have said that his decalogue is based on "modern needs." A few of them are, it is true, "modern," whatever that means, but most of them are as old as the hills. Some of them, but not all, will be found in other and older decalogues or rules for life.

It will be seen at once that it is a code of personal ethics, not religious in any sense of the word. It says nothing about man's relation to God; it says nothing about that sense of mystical communion with God which is religion. There is no creed of belief. It avers that all religions are "equal," meaning, probably, equally good. Certainly neither traditional Judaism, Mohammedanism nor Christianity admits this.

Furthermore, traditional Judaism explicitly denied the equality of mankind, relying as it did on its conviction of being a "chosen people." And historical Christianity has implicitly, by its deeds, denied belief in the equality of mankind. The entire far-eastern policy of Christendom is a denial of this belief.

Truth and Love are the common factors of all religions and of all moral codes, but their interpretations differ greatly from faith to faith.

Poverty, Chastity and Obedience were and are the three-fold vows of the monastic system of the Christian Church. Gandhi allows voluntarily for two of them, chastity and freedom from personal property, but he says nothing about obedience. His whole code is one of voluntary self-expression. He holds, apparently, to no church and he pledges obedience to no state.

Doctrine an Ancient One

Asceticism, or abstinence from eating for pleasure (and probably from flesh meat, though he does not mention it), from alcohol, tobacco and drugs, has always been an aim of most religions, except that of the Old Testament Jews, although certain sects of them, like the Nazarites, were ascetic. Mohammedanism began as an ascetic religion, particularly as regards wine. Oriental religion has always been ascetic, and even Christianity showed a strong tendency toward it in its first centuries, although later the church put asceticism in its proper place as the voluntary choice of a devoted few.

Yet, although historical Christianity has always wisely discouraged asceticism, as both unnecessary and actually harmful, the idea of attaining personal holiness by extreme renunciation has always had a strong attraction for men. In spite of the plain evidence of the New Testament, men of the Puritan temper have always tried to read an asceticism into the words and life of Jesus which the record does not warrant. They, however, have always been exceptions to the temper of western Christendom, which as a whole has always believed that right living has little to do with abstentation from meat-eating, wine-drinking, tobacco-smoking and the reasonable enjoyment of the pleasures of life.

Gandhi's doctrine of service to one's fellow is ancient and universal. The precepts of Deuteronomy, as emphasized by the Prophets, were strongly socialistic in their emphasis on the duty which the rich and strong owe to the poor and weak. The Christian "golden rule" has been more successful in practice than a good deal of other Christian doctrine, although it has always been coupled with a strong belief in private property as an incentive to good living.

Gandhi's belief that one's bread must be earned by the sweat of one's brow stands almost alone. It is not to be found elsewhere, except in some of the more extreme sects. Tolstoi held that belief, and Romain Rolland tells us that Tolstoi got some of his ideas from the Buddhists, and that in turn Gandhi received some of his beliefs from Tolstoi. Which may account for this one striking resemblance of Gandhi to Tolstoi. But the idea that manual labor is life's law belongs to a primitive society where it was dictated by necessity. Surely it has no connection with "modern ideas." It is an ethical throw-back.

* * *

I am inclined to believe that much of such a decalogue as Gandhi's has no meaning or value for most happy, useful, fruitful and decent people. It is the recipe for a saint, that is, for one who is determined to devote his entire energy to a single ideal purpose. By denying himself sexual indulgence, property, meat, drink and stimulant, he can free his energy for the thing he is interested in. Like an athlete he goes into training to obtain the utmost efficiency of spiritual and moral energy for his ideal and self-less purposes.

People who are strong enough to do that usually have their names writ large in history. Buddha had that quality, and Jesus (though his asceticism was not extreme), and St. Francis, and a long list of self-devoted martyrs who influenced the world they lived in.

But it is probably good for the world that there are not too many of these people. It is certainly bad for the world that there are so many who would like to impose such disciplines on everybody, to serve an ideal good which, somehow, never is realized. The philosophy which recognizes that man is a healthy animal, as well as a potential saint, is probably safest for the great majority in the long run.

LUCKY DOG AND ROUTED FIRE VICTIMS

Oh, fireman, save my doggie! And they did. Sadie Schmartz, who was routed by fire in her home, 21 Cunningham st., Dorchester, and her canine pet, Teddy, who was saved by smoke-eaters. The dog was overcome when trapped by the flames. The fire drove five families to the street. (Staff photo.)

5 FAMILIES HIT IN $10,000 FIRE

A fire, believed to have started from a short circuit in electric wiring, drove out five families in their nightclothes and did $10,000 damage to the apartment building top floor at 21 Cunningham st., Dorchester, early today.

Frank Berman, 12, who lives on the second floor, first saw the fire. A still alarm was put in by Joseph Berman.

Those driven out by the fire were the families of Morris Fertil and Clement Graiver on the first floor, Joseph Berman and Morris Goodgee on the second floor and the family of Morris Schwartz on the third floor.

$108,000 LOOT TAKEN AWAY IN NEWTON

Boston Police Probe Delay in Reporting Theft of Auto Plates by Bandits

Two of the five men who escaped with $108,000 in jewels yesterday in Newton were partially identified in rogues' gallery pictures today at Boston police headquarters.

In an automobile with stolen number plates over the regular registration, the five held up William Pennfield, 40, of Washington st., Brookline, a Boston jeweler, and Jacques Leff, 38, of E. 80th st., New York, salesman for a New York firm.

It was the third holdup of its kind in five weeks and the fifth sizable jewel robbery in Greater Boston within a year.

ROGUES' GALLERY FAIR

Two Boston men, catalogued with long criminal records, were selected from the gallery as two who looked "something like" two of the bandits.

Pennfield and Leff told police they had just left the home of a prospective buyer, George Perkins of Lasholm rd., Newton, when the holdup took place.

They had turned into Beacon st., in Pennfield's car, they said, when the bandit car approached and forced them into Glenn ave., a lonely side street.

One of the bandits stepped out and, brandishing a gun, stepped over and took a case of jewels from the floor of the Pennfield car between Leff's feet.

Threatening harm if the victims followed, the bandit returned to his car and was driven away.

STOLEN PLATES REPORTED

Police believe the stolen plates, taken from the automobile of a Revere man, were attached as a blind and were probably removed once the bandits reached a remote section.

Identification of the plates caused an internal investigation in the Boston police department today when it was discovered their loss was reported to headquarters but failed to go on the teletype until more than 12 hours later.

MY ROMANCE

His Marriage No Bar to Continued Company With Other Women.

RUDY AND BRIDE ON APARTMENT TERRACE

Chapter IV.

Why did you marry, and thus break the hearts of 2,000,000 (the estimate is not mine) flappers?

That is one of the questions which has been asked me most insistently since our marriage, although I don't know just what reason there can be for presuming that I was able to inspire such a vast amount of emotion.

DENIES HE'S SHEIK

I am by no means a "sheik," nor do I make any pretense of being a heart breaker. If I had had any unusual vanity it would have been wrecked and killed long ago by the girl who after we first began to broadcast, danced past the bandstand and asked me "When will Fay Vallee be here?" But at any rate, the above question decides me to answer as to my emotional relation with my audiences. And I shall try to answer it.

And here are a few of the other questions that have been asked me:

"Why did you select Fay Webb to be your wife?"

"What qualities in her appealed to you?"

"Does she meet your ideal of womanhood?"

"Why do you think your marriage will be happy?"

"What, do you think, are the keys for happy marriage?"

"How can romance be kept alive in marriage?"

"Can a man love more than one woman?"

"What are the danger spots of marriage?"

"Do you expect to have other women friends?"

"Are you jealous?"

"Had Miss Webb heard you sing before she fell in love with you?"

"Will the same fervor and romance go into your singing as before?"

QUIZZED ON DIVORCE

"Do you believe in easy divorce?"

"What are your hopes, ambitions, and plans for future?"

"Do you expect to have children?"

These are a few of the questions that have been asked. I shall try to answer them frankly and sincerely, and as best I can, because I think the questioners, representing the public who listens to my radio broadcasts, are entitled to an answer.

Now, which shall come first? Let me be one of the most difficult ones:

"Do you expect to have other women friends?"

The answer is yes, decidedly so.

In the previous chapter I explained that it is necessary for me to spend a considerable part of my time at her home in California because of her health. And I feel that while she was away, and even while she was here, I would probably be seen in the company of other women from time to time. I predicted that this circumstance would undoubtedly give rise to some quarrels, to malicious and at least uninformed gossip. But there will be no reason for gossip.

Before our marriage, Fay and I settled that each of us was to be free to have friends among the opposite sex. I like the company of women as well as men and she would not be humanly human did not enjoy the company of men and women. When we are separated by forces of circumstances, there is no reason why either of us should deny ourselves the pleasure such as we get from such company.

Naturally, when we are at home together, we prefer the company of

(The recent marriage of Fay Vallee, famous orchestra leader and radio crooner, was the culmination of a thrilling romance. And here he tells in his own words the story of that romance. In today's chapter he outlines some of the questions he expects to answer, and says that despite their marriage both he and his bride expect to have friends of the opposite sex.—Editor.)

WANT A PARROT? WHISTLE!

Parrots may be stubborn when you ask questions, so try whistling. Mary Delancy's brother lost his pet last night in Dorchester. So sister set out to find it. She whistled along Brinsley st. and the parrot flew from a tree and came to her. (Staff photo.)

BOYS TO SEEK SCHOLARSHIPS

Twenty-four newsboys from 10 Easton schools will compete next Wednesday for 10 college scholarships to be awarded by the Harry E. Burroughs Newsboys Foundation in the foundation's building at 19 Somerset st.

The candidates have been recommended by their instructors on the basis of character, need of assistance, adaptability and scholarship.

The scholarships, which are be... awarded for the fourth year, provide financial assistance for the successful candidates during their first year in college. After the first year the foundation assumes that the student will be able to take care of himself.

The records show that only three of the youths who have entered college on scholarships have required assistance after the first year. Twenty-nine are still in college entirely on their own resources.

WHISTLING GIRL FINDS PARROT

Whistling in the dark, Miss Mary Delaney of 7 Strathmore rd., Dorchester, went along Brinsley st. last night in search of the pet parrot of her brother Edward.

The bird, a Mexican species with blue feathers and a yellow comb, had escaped from its cage and taken refuge in a tree in Brinsley st.

The parrot was unable to resist the whistling of Miss Delaney, and joined her, only to be once more incarcerated.

2 HURT IN BACK BAY CRASH

Two persons were injured and more than a score of trolley passengers shaken up when a grocery truck and a Chestnut Hill car collided today at Berkeley and Boylston sts., Back Bay.

The crash tied up street car traffic and Boylston st. subway for more than 20 minutes while wrecking crews worked to clear the tracks.

According to Elevated officials the grocery truck, operated by Chesley G. Rudolph of Highland ave., Somerville, swerved into the path of the street car, traveling in the same direction, struck the car, skidded and crashed into a parked sedan owned by Mrs. F. V. Chase of Buena Vista rd., Arlington.

Mrs. Chase was slightly injured, as was Rudolph.

Thomas Brown, the motorman, Frank Carr, the conductor, and the passengers on the car were unhurt.

Gen. Foote Off to Europe Tomorrow

Gen. Alfred F. Foote, State commissioner of public safety and head of the State police, leaves tomorrow for a six weeks' trip to Europe where he will tour the battlefields and study police methods. He will be accompanied by his wife and two daughters, whom he will leave in Europe for a six months' study of music.

Gen. Foote goes to New York tonight by boat and sails on the Leviathan.

Missing Boston Woman Is Sought

She has been missing since July 18.

On that day she left her home for the North Station. She planned to go to Portsmouth, N. H. It is believed she never boarded the train. A big German shepherd dog she had with her was not checked on the train and has not been seen since

POLICE 'EXAMS' CALL FOR ESSAY ON 'GRAFT'

DAILY TRUE STORY
THE TEST OF LOVE

"I CAN CHANGE A TIRE," SAID NANCY

They had been driving for less than an hour when it began to rain. A few spattering drops at first and then came a rush of wind. And with it came a deluge.

The little car actually shook in the fury of the storm as Clay brought it to a halt, unable to see the road ahead.

"It will slacken off in a few minutes," he said to Nancy. Nancy smiled wanly in answer as she turned up the collar of her light coat. The roof of the car, hammered by the driving rain, was leaking.

They were in a world apart with nothing about them but the impenetrable sheets of hurtling rain.

In a few minutes the first fury of the storm passed and Clay started the car again hesitantly crawling along the slippery road.

"I'm afraid this is going to ruin our week-end," he said.

"It doesn't matter," answered Nancy. "Just so we get there."

"That's just it," said Clay. "We may not get there. Not at this rate. We've still got nearly a hundred miles to go."

Then he gave his attention to the road ahead, or what little he could see of it. Nancy wondered what the Carrolls would do when night came and they failed to arrive. The Carrolls, a young married couple, had invited her and Clay and several others to spend the week-end at a seaside cottage they had taken for the Summer.

A Sudden Crash
Auto Plunges Into Truck

Nancy's thoughts were interrupted by a sudden crash. She looked up startled. The front of their car seemed to be hurled in the side of a large truck. She heard Clay swear softly as he opened the door and got out, to be drenched by the rain.

Two men got down from the truck and with them Clay examined the damage. Then he got back into the car and backed away. Radiator and fenders were crumpled, but the car still ran. Cautiously Clay circled the truck and went on.

"Didn't see him until it was too late," he explained to Nancy. "As much my fault as it was his, I guess."

As he spoke he reached over and patted her hand. "Don't worry," he said. "We'll get through somehow."

"I'm not worried," said Nancy. "I love it."

She didn't mean that exactly, because she was wet and cold and she was beginning to feel hungry. But she wasn't worried. Ordinarily she would be. But somehow she wasn't with Clay.

There followed another hour of creeping along the road and then began to go down a long hill. It was pitch dark now and the headlights illuminated the road for only a few feet ahead.

"That collision cracked the radiator," he explained. "I'll have to let it cool off a little. The Deerpun River is at the bottom of the hill. One of those old wooden bridges crosses it. I hope it hasn't caved in in this rain."

It held. When, twenty minutes later, they reached the bottom of the long hill they saw a red light bobbing ahead of them. It was held by a man dressed in a slicker and rubber boots.

"You'll have to go back," he said. "You can't cross here. The bridge is closed. She's likely to go at any minute."

"Is there another bridge anywhere near here?" asked Clay. Nancy noted how calm his voice was despite their predicament.

"You can cross at Keensburg," said the man. "There's a new concrete bridge there. Go back and take the first road to your right. It's about thirty miles."

When they got back to the top of the hill the car had to be halted again to allow the engine to cool.

"You'd think this rain would keep it cool, wouldn't you?" asked Clay. For the rain was still coming down as hard as ever in the night.

Nancy glanced at her wrist watch. It was after 11. Hardly had they started again when there came a sharp whee-e-ee.

"Blowout," said Clay. He looked at Nancy and she could see him grin in the dim light from the instrument board. "Well," he added.

Nancy helped him change the tire. He protested against it and once picked her up bodily and put her back into the car, but she got out again.

"There's only one flat tire on this trip," she said. "I'm not one. You'll need somebody to hold the flashlight for you and I'm going to do it. And I can change a tire as well as you can."

Both Drenched
And Hands Bruised

They both were drenched and the hands were bruised and sore when the once more started creeping along. Midnight came and passed. Then 1 o'clock and 2 o'clock. Then Keensburg. Clay stopped the car in front of the one hotel and then turned to Nancy.

"Listen," he said. "We'd be fools to try to go on tonight. We'll stay here in the hotel. It's the only thing to do. And in the morning, if you will, we'll get a license and—"

"Why, interrupted Nancy, "you don't have to do that."

She understood. He was offering to marry her to protect her reputation.

Suddenly his arms were about her. "Why, you precious little idiot," he said, "I'm not asking you to marry me for any reason except that I love you and I know I'll be happy with you."

"And how do you know?" asked Nancy.

"He suspected it along," he said. "And, after what we've been through together, I know it must be true. Otherwise, we would have gotten on each other's nerves so frightfully we wouldn't even be speaking. There's one test for love like changing a tire in the rain."

And so they were married

UNTOLD TORTURE FROM ECZEMA

Ended quickly by Resinol

"For three months I suffered torture from 'weeping eczema,' and the many different remedies I tried only gave me slight temporary relief. Finally I decided to try Resinol Ointment. After the first application the itching was relieved and after the third treatment the affected surface was entirely healed. In view of what I had suffered it seems nothing short of (Signed)—Ella Mokley, 61 Mt. Auburn St., Watertown, Mass

The quickness with which Resinol acts in relieving eczema, chafing, rashes, piles, sores, etc. is amazing. Why don't you try it? At all druggists. For free sample, write Resinol, Dept. 87, Baltimore, Md.

50 TAKE TEST FOR RANK OF CAPTAIN

Lieutenant-Inspectors Are Allowed to Compete for First Time

Fifty police lieutenants, half of them lieutenant-inspectors, today with sharpened pencil and filled fountain pen were grappling with weighty questions in the civil service examination for promotion to the rank of captain.

In the morning session at the State House they were confronted with five questions dealing with police procedure, and were asked to write an essay in answer to the query:

"How would you stop graft in a police department?"

The five other questions, regarded by veterans in civil service circles as comparatively simple, were:

"How would you deal with a man you knew to be involved in a stock fraud case when you saw boarding a train leaving the city?

"How would you deal with a man you arrested as a pickpocket who had a gun on his person at the time of his arrest, and who claimed the gun had been placed in his pocket after his arrest?"

"How would you, as captain of a police station, deal with a sergeant under you whose conduct showed that he did not have the morale of the men under him at heart?

"Would you arrest on sight a man you knew to be wanted (a) for a misdemeanor (b) for a crime?"

"How would you deal with a man accused of assault and battery who offered as a defense testimony that he was drunk at the time of the assault?"

Today's examination is the first one in which lieutenant-inspectors have been allowed to compete with uniformed lieutenants for station captaincies.

MILK WAGON TAKES TO MYSTIC WATERS

DAUNTLESS IS A WISE DOG

Heat or no heat, Dauntless is dauntless, and he proved it when, right smack in the middle of a broiling afternoon, he entertained the panting Boston Evening American staff while his, and their tongues were hanging out.

Dauntless is the magnificent show dog which took the place of Peter the Great when Peter reached an untimely end, and finished the picture, "The 13th Hour," with Lionel Barrymore.

Then he worked in other pictures, including, "Under the Black Eagle" and "Two Arabian Knights," with Louis Wolheim and William Boyd.

Dauntless is making personal appearances at the Scollay Sq. Olympia with his master, Scotty Wilson, at the winding up of a two-year tour. He walked into the American office and bed his willingness to show off.

At direction from his master, who also directs him in the movies, Dauntless, obeying common sense as in English gained first one direction, then the other, walked in a specified direction, walked back, turned around—started and stopped, and made no error in following direction.

Then Dauntless, obeying otherquietly-spoken directions, stepped on a chair, turned around, sat down, and directed his attention to a typewriter. It was an almost uncanny exhibition of understanding between dog and master.

He was drawing down $900 a week in pictures two years ago when he left for his long tour and personal appearance. He is much smarter now and of course is better known, so his salary probably will be much higher when he returns to Hollywood in the fall

4 RESCUED IN SEA VENTURE

A mile off shore from Thompson's Island, a Coast Guard patrol boat sighted the 12-foot, home made yacht Sea Spray, outward bound and manned by a crew of four.

Her sail was an old bed sheet, her rations a jug of water, her skipper by right of seniority was 15 years old. Sea water sloshed ankle deep in her cockpit and she was in a fair way to swamp at any minute.

The crew of the patrol boat after a mile chase stood by and prepared to render aid, when a hail from the Sea Spray brought the seasoned veterans to all standing.

"Go home and mind your own business," shouted the Sea Spray's doughty skipper.

Nevertheless, Sea Spray's maiden cruise ended at the end of a tow rope attached to the patrol boat, which brought her and her crew of four back to the Savin Hill Yacht Club.

The rescued were John Donald, 12, and his brother Dan, 15, of Sidney st.; John Maloney, 11, of Sidney st., and "The Mouse."

Bike Rider Dying

Riding his bicycle, Joseph Dow, 14, of Forest st., Roxbury, crashed into the side of an automobile truck at Dudley and Vine sts., Roxbury, receiving probably fatal injuries

MISFIT CLOTHES AND TWO CURIOUS WOMEN TRAP TWO JAIL BREAKERS

SOME ARE LUCKY TO GET THEM BACK

KNEW SOMETHING WAS WRONG, THAT'S ALL

Mrs. Alfreda Coleridge, who called the police, didn't know the two men trying on clothes in the street were escaped convicts; nor did Mrs. Mitchell, a neighbor, who called her by phone. And if Mrs. Coleridge hadn't hushed her dog Trixie, his barking might have scared away the pair. (Staff photo.)

THE OFFICERS WHO CAUGHT THEM

Patrolman William L. Anderson and Sergt. William A. Curtin, who, with Patrolman John J. O'Brien, captured the two prisoners early today in Cambridge. Picture also shows stolen clothing which Quigley and Gilpatrick were putting on a cleansing machine and the revolver taken from Watchman Hannon.

BACK, UNDER A DOUBLED PENALTY

SOBER, SAID 5; JUDGE SAID 'NO'

The question of whether Harry Reed of Winchester was sober when his car crashed into a letter box in Myrtle ave. Arlington on June 13 was settled a fortnight ago in East Cambridge court is concerned today when Judge Arthur P. Stone sentenced Reed to a month in the House of Correction.

Five witnesses testified that Reed, a chauffeur on an estate in Arlington, Wednesday was sober when he had liquor on his breath a few minutes before the accident. Four other witnesses, including three policemen who arrested him, said he had been drinking.

"I am not impressed with the testimony of the witnesses who said Reed had not been drinking," Judge Stone said. "Those officers [illegible] honest and experienced [illegible] of this kind [illegible] their testimony."

According to testimony offered in court, Reed was fined $100 for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor in 1927.

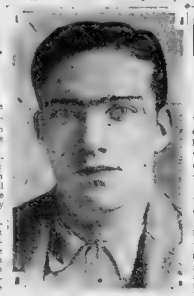
BROCKTON GIRL SECRET BRIDE

The parents of Miss Catherine Turcotte, 18, of Lyons st., Brockton, who reported her missing to police yesterday, know where she is today.

But one can't Miss Catherine Turcotte any more. She is Mrs. Eugene Chapman of St. Botolph st., Boston, and her telephone call to her parents at their home wrote off another missing girl mystery in police records.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Turcotte reported to Brockton authorities that their daughter had left home Tuesday to attend an outing of the Stetson Shoe Co.'s employes in South Weymouth and had not been heard from since. George Chapman, her friend, works for the Stetson company.

Today she called her parents from the home of her sister, Mrs. Maurice O'Brien of St. Botolph st., Boston, and informed them that, instead of going to the outing she and Chapman had gone to New Hampshire, where they were married.



STILL AT LARGE

Ernest Abbott, the third and so far free member of the jail-breaking trio, is supposed to be in the woods around Billerica. As he has a rifle he could be a dangerous man to meet.

PRISONER FLEES COURT DOCK

Charles Cammarano, 18, of Wordsworth st., East Boston, escaped, from the prisoners' dock of East Boston Court today while waiting arraignment on larceny charges. No one could be found who saw him leave the dock.

Judge Joseph H. Barnes had waited several minutes after the court clerk called the case.

Cammarano, the same youth who last January was charged with threatening to put an East Boston sergeant "on the spot" was arrested last night for larceny of a machine that belonged to Patrolman James O'Donnell, of the East Boston Station.

He was captured after a chase by Patrolmen Patrick Moloney and Ross Jones, and another charge of larceny of two crates of fruit was lodged against him.

The alleged threat of last January grew out of the arrest of Cammarano with three of youths charged with the theft of an auto in Winthrop.

JOHN M. HANNON

Driver Hurt as Crash Hurls Bottle

Mrs. Sarah Kaplan, 32, of Canton ave., Stoughton, was badly injured yesterday when she was struck by an automobile which, crashing Nantasket ave. near Bay st., Nantasket Beach, Mrs. Kaplan suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. A bottle of soda she was carrying was hurled through the windshield, striking a bad cut on the face of the operator, Frank Mazzei of Putnam ave., Cambridge.

CRASH BARES AUTO THEFT

Patrolman Daniel J. Sullivan of a Roxbury police discovered today that an automobile crash in which he figured last Tuesday had exposed the driver of the other car as an automobile thief from Portland, Me.

Officer Sullivan's car was struck from the rear in a parkway in Jamaica Plain. When he attempted to exchange licenses and registrations with Ralph Eldridge, the other driver, Eldridge explained that his certificates were at home.

In Roxbury court yesterday he used the same excuse, and was fined $10. The fine was suspended when he promised to reappear today with the papers. Today Roxbury police learned from authorities that the car Eldridge was driving had been stolen in Portland.

A teletype message asking the arrest of Eldridge, who lives in Lewiston, Me., was broadcast.

FR. CALLAN SENT TO SOUTH CHINA

Greater Boston and New Englanders are included among recently ordained priests who have been assigned to the Orient by the Catholic Foreign Mission Society at Maryknoll Seminary, Ossining, N. Y.

The priests were assigned today by the Very Rev. James A. Walsh, rector of the seminary, and will sail for the Far East early in September. In the group are Rev. John F. Callan of South Boston, Rev. John J. Toomey of New Bedford and Rev. John A. McGinn of Providence, going to south China.

Army and Navy 'Y' an Oasis, Says Curley

A strong endorsement of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. at Charlestown was delivered today by Mayor Curley following his inspection of the building in City sq.

"Like the oasis in the desert, this building serves the strangers in our community," the mayor said.

Married July 18, News Is Out Now

A secret wedding which took place July 18 was revealed today by the former Miss Ada Devereaux of Washington st., Lynn.

She admitted to friends having been married to Neils Carlson, a Shoe City clerk, but failed to give any further details.

CURLEY URGES TEACHERS' AID

Still standing to his statement that Boston teachers have not contributed to the city's welfare fund Mayor Curley today tempered his former criticism of them with receipt of a letter from Chairman Hurley of the school committee that they have subscribed to an independent fund for at least $6700.

"My position that the burden should be borne by every citizen hasn't changed," the mayor said in speaking of welfare funds.

"Additional funds have been very helpful and contributions by the school teachers woul The most welcome.

"The statement that the teachers had not contributed one dollar to the city welfare funds still stands, however."

Bail Granted "Man Without a Country"

Bail of $5000 was furnished by Alberto Costanzo, "man without a country," pending the appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the denial by Federa Judge James A. Lowell on Monday of a writ of habeas corpus.

Costanzo who has been ordered deported to Italy has been in the country since he was six years old and his wife and two children were all born in the country. They are living at 211 Bay st., Brighton.

COURT DECISION RESTRAINS SALE

A South Boston woman who charged the friend she trusted with attempting to defraud her of her property today asked Judge Winfred H. Whiting in Superior court, to continue an order restraining the friend, Mrs. Abbie A. Sutherland, from disposing of property the complainant claims as her.

Mrs. Mary E. Bowes' petition stated that, due to her "age and infirmities," she negotiated a trust agreement in 1925 with Mrs. Sutherland, who was to take care of her money and property.

Since that time, Mrs. Bowes charges, her former confidante has collected on a $7000 mortgage held by Mrs. Bowes, and banked the money in her own name.

The continuance of the restraining order was allowed.

UNHAPPY MARRIAGES ARE BECOMING FASHIONABLE

By HELEN ROWLAND

* * *

Some people think the country is going to the dogs, but others can still keep up the pasmens on the car.

* * *

A husband is not like a hat; you can always get another one, of course, but you can't keep the old one on the shelf, just in case you don't like the new one.

* * *

Unhappy marriages are becoming so fashionable that a really happy wife is almost apologetic when she admits that she is perfectly contented with her husband.

* * *

Two people never know how much they love or hate each other until they have to share the same shower, the same newspaper and the same dollar bill.

* * *

These open faced beach shoes, which all the women are wearing, convince one more than ever that there are some things in this world which simply can't be glorified—such as a frog, a bald head and the human toe.

* * *

Marriage is no disgrace—and yet, when the average man confesses to an attractive woman that he is married, he acts as apologetic about it as though he were confessing to a wooden leg or a spot on his character.

* * *

There is a book which tells twenty ways to catch a wife; but it doesn't mention ONE way to "uncatch" her.

* * *

Real love is founded on mutual admiration and trust and sympathy. You'll find a lot of it—in novels.

* * *

Beware of the love-moth. This is the time of year when a single man should keep his heart on ice and a married woman should put her vanity away in cold storage.

Sane Dieting Is Safest Way to Reduce

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

A FAT child is often the subject of much unnecessary ridicule. The fear that "no one loves a fat one" is grossly exaggerated. Most stout persons I have encountered have a much more winning and pleasing personalities than many of their lean brothers.

Dr. Copeland

But, as these individuals grow older, they are likely to become quite sensitive about their gleanness. It is not surprising, I am sure, that they are willing to resort to almost any method that has in it the hope of fewer pounds of weight.

Recently, there has been great carelessness in the use of thyroid extract. It is true that under some circumstances thyroid gland products cause a marked reduction in weight. But the use of such drugs materially increases the heat production of the body. This places an undesirable strain on the heart and blood vessels.

At a recent gathering of the American College of Physicians, a warning was issued against the unwise treatment of obesity by thyroid products. At this meeting of eminent physicians, it was decided that stout people can safely and just as easily reduce by proper dieting.

The general public mind is warned against the use of this medicine as a quick means of reducing. Whatever loss of weight the body undergoes should be brought about in a gradual manner. Sudden and great loss of poundage is decidedly detrimental. Often great harm is accomplished by this undesirable method of reducing.

The excessive eating of sweets and pastries and of munching between meals must be avoided. Likewise, those who are overweight are not encouraged to go on a rigid fasting diet. In many respects, this is just as harmful as the administration of thyroid.

By a decrease in the amount of food consumed there is reduction in the weight without harm or strain. This results in less heat production.

GRAND HOTEL :-: By VICKI BAUM

Dancer Is Consoled by Baron

Three hours of work by herself, four hours' performance, each day like the last. Old Pinsenov. Old Witte. Old Suzette and not a soul else, never any warmth.

You held your hands to hotel radiators and that was all. And then when all was over and done with and life had come to the verge of the abyss, a man appeared in your room at night and spoke those long-forgotten words with which in other days the whole world had rung. Grusinskaya collapsed. She felt a sharp pang. Pain. It was only tears wrung at last and at last released from the stress of that night. She was ecstatic as if these tears through her whole body, even in her toes and the tips of her fingers and then in her heart, and at last they reached her eyes and rolled off her long, thickly painted eyelashes and fell on the open palms of her hands.

Gaigern saw all this and it made him glad but. Poor creature, he thought, poor little woman. Now she is crying. This is really silly.

After the first two painful tears it was easier. They were followed by a light but copious shower, warm and cool at once like summer rain. Then came a passionate downpour, a torrent that brought with it all the black paint from her eyelids, and finally Grusinskaya threw herself on her bed and sobbed out words in Russian with her hands clasped and pressed against her mouth. At the sight of this, Gaigern, fresh from an hotel thief, who had been within an ace of felling the woman, into a simple, good-natured, big-hearted man who could not see a woman weep without wishing to go to her help. He lost all trace of fear on his own account, and his heart beat quickly from pity. He went over, seating his arms on either side of the little, sobbing body he bent over her and mumbled his whispered consolations with her sobs. He had nothing particular to say. He would have comforted a crying child or a hurt animal in much the same words. "Poor little woman," he said. "Poor little woman, poor little Grusinskaya, she's crying. It does you good, doesn't it, to cry? Then cry, poor little hurt creature. What have they done to you? Have they ill-treated you? Are you glad I'm here? Shall I stay? Are you afraid of anything? Is that why you cry? Oh, you poor little thing."

He raised one arm from the bed and took the clasped hands from her mouth and kissed them, they were wet with tears and black like the hands of a little girl; her face too was stained with the trickles of black paint from her make-up. This made Gaigern laugh. In spite of her tears Grusinskaya observed the hearty movement of the shoulders that a strong man makes when he laughs. Gaigern went into the bathroom. He came back with a sponge and carefully wiped her face. He had brought a towel, too. Now Grusinskaya lay still. She had had her cry out, and was content. Ga gern sat and smiled at her.

"Well?" he asked.

Grusinskaya whispered something that he did not understand.

The word went home. It hit on his heart like a strong ball in fast play. It almost hurt him. He heard an echo in his soul as though from his childhood, from a word he had left behind. He shut his ears to it. If only I had a cigarette he thought, feeling that he was getting tender-hearted. Grusinskaya had looked in his eyes for a moment with a strangely melting and almost happy expression. Now she got up and angled with her long toes for the slippers which had fallen from her feet. She recovered her self-possession.

"There, there," said she. "What a sentimental scene, Grusinskaya weeping. That is a night worth seeing. It is many years since she did such a thing, Monsieur gave me a bad fright. It is he who is responsible for this painful scene."

She spoke in the third person, wishing to put a distance between them, but after what had passed it was not easy. Gaigern had nothing to say in reply.

"It is frightful how the stage frays the nerves," she went on in German, for she thought that he had perhaps not understood. "Discipline! Oh yes, we have plenty of that. But discipline is horribly exhausting. Discipline means always doing what you don't want to do and take no pleasure in doing. Have you experienced the weariness that comes of discipline?"

"I? Oh, no. I do only what I take pleasure in doing."

Grusinskaya raised a hand to which all its former grace had returned.

"I see, monsieur. You take pleasure in coming into a lady's bedroom, and you come. You take pleasure in a dangerous climb on to a balcony, so you do it. And what is your pleasure now?"

"I should like to smoke." Gaigern said frankly. Grusinskaya went to the writing table and held out her little cigarette box.

ADMIRED AT CHANTILLY

Created by Vionnet

—SKETCHED IN PARIS—

The Baroness Edward de Rothschild wore this wide-brimmed velvet hat in sapphire blue at the French Derby last week in Chantilly. The brim dipped at the right side where it was wider and had a pleated fold which is indicated in the sketch. The dress from Vionnet was of pale blue crepe georgette with a pin-tucked design, typical of this house, worked all over by hand.

Her Family's Jealous Because She Is a Success

By WINIFRED BLACK

BILL'S GONE to South America to build bridges.

There are plenty of bridges that Bill could build at home, and he isn't particularly crazy about South America.

No, he isn't in a jam of any kind. Bill's rather a goodish fellow in his own way, and has never caused any of his family any more worry than the average boy.

Winifred Black

Bill's sister Betty is going to be married.

She's traveled a lot and she knows a great many interesting people, but Betty's going to marry rather a dull young man who will never get very far in the world and nobody who knows either Betty or her Young Man believes that Betty is desperately in love.

But Betty wants to have a home of her own, and Betty's Young Man is just dull enough to make Betty seem very clever, and Betty wants to get away from home.

It's a nice home, too, as homes go, rather unusually comfortable; two or three bathrooms and a fireplace or so, and a patio, and a view, and a lot of books and quite a few pictures that are not half bad.

Betty's father is an agreeable sort of man. He's at his club a good deal, and he's a bit of a fanatic about golf, but otherwise, he's all right.

It's Betty's mother that's wrong.

All wrong. Betty's mother is clever, and she's a success. People make a fuss over her and men are always falling in love with her, for some reason or other. Betty's mother is a perfectly nice woman, as far as men are concerned, and when the men fell in love with her, she just laughs and turns them into friends, and her husband knows all about it and doesn't mind.

But her husband hates her, just the same. He isn't jealous of her admirers, he's jealous of her success.

And the children. Billy and Betty, they're jealous, too. When people say to Betty, are you So and So's daughter? and Betty has to say yes, she has to bite her tongue to keep from saying "I wish I wasn't."

Our Daily Salad

UNCOOKED SALAD DRESSING

1 tbsp. salt.
1 tbsp. mustard.
½ tsp. pepper.
3 eggs.
¼ cup melted butter.
1 cup vinegar.
1 can condensed milk.

Mix paprika, salt, mustard, and pepper together with a little of the vinegar, and butter, the rest of the vinegar, then eggs well-beaten, and last the condensed milk. Beat all together well with an egg beater. Set in a cold place. Chill thoroughly before using.

HARD SAUCE TASTES GREAT ON A FRESH GREEN APPLE PIE

Even in warm weather a green apple pie fresh from the oven is most appealing. And if you want to make it taste extra good put a spoonful of hard sauce on top of each cut. Just cream together ½ cup butter and 2 cups powdered sugar. When smooth, beat in 1 teaspoon vanilla.

In all kinds of cookery where a sweetening ingredient is needed, remember that refined cane sugar is the recognized standard. The Sugar Institute.

A DIVISION OF NATIONAL DAIRY

The Murder of the Choir Singer

By ANTHONY ABBOT

"NO," SAID COLT, after a moment's thought. "I think your plan of confronting Mrs. Beazeley with La Rubbie is a good idea. Tell you what I suggest, Dougherty. You work on the family. Go after them as hard as you can. I'll take the outside angles. Let's meet 24 hours from now and see what happens."

"That's okay with me," agreed the district attorney.

As they were clasping hands on this compact, Detective Perkins came fleeing toward us across the lawn like a shadow among the trees.

GERALD'S GUN

"Mr. Commissioner," he exclaimed, "I've got two hot tips for you. One is that the pistol has been identified by its number. Headquarters just telephoned. The gun belongs to Mr. Curtainwood."

I could hear the shocked intake of Dougherty's breath. Here seemed swift confirmation of his theory. He had blamed Gerald for the shooting, and now we knew that it was Gerald's weapon we had retrieved from the slime of the river-bed.

"What else, Perkins?"

"This, sir. It was found in the room upstairs. Captain Lengel told me to be sure to give it to you, but I forgot it in the Rubbie business and all, until just now."

The detective laid some soft object in the commissioner's hand. I saw Colt stare at it thoughtfully, smell of it, then turn on his flash-light and study the object intently.

It was a pair of brown kid gloves. Without a comment, the Commissioner put the gloves away in his pocket. Slowly we walked back to the rear door of Number 13 Sangster Terrace, where we found Mrs. Rubble fanning herself with an extra. Presently Dougherty led his mountainous witness off on his important mission to bring her face to face with the clergyman's widow.

Colt turned to Detective Perkins when the door had closed upon Dougherty.

"Have these gloves been identified?" he asked.

"Yes, sir, by Colonel Powell. He was here this afternoon—late—and showed me the initials—'F. B'—stitched inside."

Not until then did Colt address me. When he spoke his voice had a ring of nervous joy.

"Tony," he said, "these gloves are the missing clue I have needed all along. At last I'm beginning to see daylight in this affair."

When Colt and I drove off from the house with the red door, I expected the car to head straight for the commissioner's home in Seventieth st. The last 36 hours had been full of activity and excitement; now the time had come for sleep. But I should have known Thatcher Colt better.

MUCH PUZZLED

Hunched back in the upholstered seat, he smoked his pipe in silence for several blocks. Finally he called out to Neil McMahon to drive us down to Fourteenth st.

"We are going to the Italian opera," explained Colt. "Tonight they are performing Von Suppe's 'Boccaccio.' If we hurry we shall be there in time for the miserierdis chorus. I know of nothing more stimulating, when one is faced with a problem, than to permit one's self deliberately to be bored."

(Copyright, 1931, by Covici-Friede Co.)

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

Thatcher Colt talked neither of music nor murders, but of annuals and perennials and the garden that some day he meant to grow in the back yard of his house on Seventieth st.

Before the end of the opera's second act, we were back in Colt's study.

"You can sleep in the guest-room, and we shall both get on the job early tomorrow," proposed the commissioner over a good-night smoke.

"We'll both feel better for some sleep," I shied, with a colossal yawn.

"I'm afraid I shan't be able to sleep—not because I don't wish to, or need to, but this damned case so plagues my mind. One theory fights with another, and all the theories fight the known facts. My head is a sort of free-for-all.

WOMAN SUSPECTED

"I must admit, too, that Dougherty's set-up haunts me. For all its defects, it has a verisimilance of truth. It seems dreadful to suspect a woman, in an affair like this. Since centuries time we are accustomed, in such bloodthirsty crimes, to look for a male culprit.

"I shall lose sleep tonight over Elisabeth Beazeley and her blood-stained cosh. One wouldn't call her a clinging vine of a woman, and yet, Tony, something keeps telling me she is innocent. It is not a hunch—it's a deduction. I believe that Mrs. Beazeley would consider a murder a social indiscretion almost as odious as adultery itself."

"The reality of this entire puzzle has so far swamped us," he muttered. "But I believe I'm getting my finger nearer to it all the time. You know, Tony, I sometimes think that in the whole density of dunderheads among police officials, I am the most stupid and the most fallacious."

I was about to protest but he checked me.

ANOTHER THOUGHT

"Another thought to sweeten your dreams has just occurred to me. We have heard so much about the survival of the strong. Yet the strong, fierce beasts of the earth are almost extinct, and the hill-sides are the inheritance of harmless cows and sheep. But what happens if a sheep attacks a wolf? Now there's a question—"

As he was speaking the telephone rang and I answered it.

"It is the chief of police, calling from Norfolk, Va." I reported in some astonishment.

"Yes. I sent Hutchinson down there, too, in one of Hollander's planes this afternoon. Hello!"

"Peton?" he suddenly exclaimed. "My God, man, are you sure? . . . When was that? . . . January, 1927? . . . Have you the records? . . . Get everything, and shoot it back to me by my man in the plane as soon as you can. Tell him to report at my office tomorrow morning."

SONNENBERG-DEGLANE BATTLE FOR WORLD TITLE

FANNING

—By GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

This Is Day of Days. Tonight's the Night. Grapple of Century.

"Sonny" vs. DeGlane. For World's Title. Xmas Basket Show.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

STAGE ALL SET FOR THE GRAPPLE OF CENTURY

BRAVES FIELD MECCA OF SPORTS FANS

In Grapple of the Century, in greatest show of all,

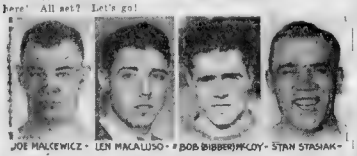
"Der Tag"—The Day. The day we so anxiously have been awaiting. The day is here and tonight's the night, the night of The Grapple of the Century. Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg, Master of the Flying Tackle, vs. Henri DeGlane, world's heavyweight wrestling champion. Ed Don George, former world's champion, vs. Nick Lutze. Stan Stasiak, the Polish Lion, vs. Pat McGill. Len Macaluso, Colgate's great All-American football star, vs. Sailor Arnold. Count Zarynoff, the Cossack, vs. Joe Spellman of Brown. Al Morelli, B. C.'s football luminary, vs. Boris Demetroff. Joe Malcewicz vs. Freddie Myers. Jim Browning of the sensational "turnover scissors" vs. Jack Wagner. Jake Patterson, Syracuse gridiron celebrity, vs. Jack Sherry. Charlie Strack vs. Karol Zbyszko. "Bibber" McCoy, Holy Cross football hero, vs. "Buck" Weaver, Chicago University. George McLeod vs. Glen Wade. The greatest galaxy of mat behemoths ever gathered together under one tent. The Show of Shows, staged by the greatest mat entertainment of them all, Paul Bowser, with part of the proceeds to go to the Xmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American. It's here! All set? Let's go!

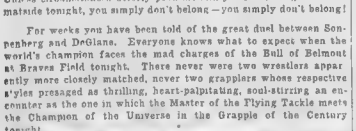


JOE MALCEWICZ - LEN MACALUSO - BOB BIBBER McCOY - STAN STASIAK

We all will be there, rich man, poor man, beggar man thief, doctor, lawyer, merchant chief; the elite from Beacon Hill, Brookline and Back Bay, the farmers from up-country, dwellers in the tenements, French Canadian mill workers from Manchester, Nashua, Lowell, Lawrence, eager to see the crown rest on the tawny thatch of Mean DeGlane; highbrows from here, there, everywhere, hoping to see Sonnenberg, former Dartmouth football hero, demonstrate the benefits of higher education; banker, bootblack, Sunday school teacher, speakeasy proprietor, show girl, shop girl, be-diamonded, be-painted dowager, rosy-cheeked girl with Nature's own painting and modeling, femmes of every description, for tonight's Grapple of the Century has caught on so with the fair sex that more women will witness the great sports spectacle than any other event in New England sports' history.

His Excellency, Governor Joseph B. Ely, Chief Executive of the grand old Bay State, has taken a box, and most of his official family also will attend. His Honor, Mayor James Michael Curley, among the first of the box purchasers for the combined appeal of both sport and charity, was too much for the great mayor of the great city to resist. When Curley goes goes the crowd from City Hall. You will not be able to toss a hat in any direction from the matside tonight without hitting notables, celebrities of every kind, leaders in all walks of life. The great Xmas Basket Fund Show of the Boston Evening American is, as we told you yesterday, not only a great sports encounter and crowd spectacle, it is an Event. Unless circumstances utterly prohibit and you're missing from the matside tonight, you simply don't belong—you simply don't belong!

For weeks you have been told of the great duel between Sonnenberg and DeGlane. Everyone knows what to expect when the world's champion faces the mad charges of the Bull of Belmont at Braves Field tonight. There never were two wrestlers apparently more closely matched, never two grapplers whose respective styles presaged as thrilling, heart-palpitating, soul-stirring an encounter as the one in which the Master of the Flying Tackle meets the Champion of the Universe in the Grapple of the Century tonight!



ED DON GEORGE - NICK LUTZE - COUNT ZARYNOFF - AL MORELLI

The great world's championship duel is surrounded by a flock of accompanying matches which would be headliners on almost every card. The whole ensemble comprises a mat spectacle such as never before was staged. As far as wrestling is concerned, it is the Show of Shows.

Naturally when a world's championship is at stake and such a flock of thrilling matches thrown together on the same program, the charity angle has been somewhat submerged. But don't forget that part of every dollar that pours with a golden flood into the box office tonight will go toward relieving suffering, want, privation in the hard winter that is to come. Remember the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American does not only provide Xmas dinners for the poor. It looks out for the poor, the suffering, the orphans, the aged, the needy the minute cold and winter comes.

Hard Times are not over. Depression still grips the country. We only are passing the peak. A hard, hard winter is ahead. The wise heads back of the Christmas Basket Fund are preparing for it. Charity, food, clothes, money, medicine, medical care will be needed as never before. With this great Grapple of the Century tonight, the Boston Evening American is making ready for it. Santa Claus is in the front line trenches digging in for the great battle to come. Every fan who hands in his $1, $2, $3, $4 or $5 is helping somebody's needy old father or mother, somebody's sick brother, sister, child, somebody's tired, despairing from walking the streets vainly searching for the job so hard to find, and which probably will be even harder to find when winter comes. Don't be a slacker when Charity calls the roll at Braves Field tonight!

The tocsin has been sounded! The beacon fires flare!
Sweet Charity is calling and you will all be there!

Vines to Play Doeg in Seabright Final

Seabright, N. J., July 30 (US)—The magnificent recuperative powers of Ellsworth Vines enabled him to qualify for the Seabright Bowl final along with John Hope Doeg, the national champion, yesterday.

Ill shortly before his match with Clifford Sutter of New Orleans No. 3 in America, Vines rested a while by the umpire's chair and then went out under a gentle hosing sun to win 6-2, 11-9. Doeg meanwhile, overcame Jack Tidball of the University of California at Los Angeles 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6 in a contest pierce with exciting volleys.

While Vines and Doeg were grimly making their way to Friday's semi-final Miss Helen Wills Moody and Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper, both of San Francisco, Hiram Jacobs of Berkeley, Cal., and Miss Marion Zinderstein Joseup, of Wilmington, Del., advanced to the semi-final round in the women's division.

Mrs. Moody quickly eliminated the Baroness Levi of New York, 6-3, 6-0. Mrs. Harper started in second ranking United States player, Marjorie Morrill of Deerwyn Mawr, 9-7, 4-6, 6-1. Miss Jacobs defeated Miss Covington of Wichita Kansas, 6-0, 7-5, and Miss Harper beated Josephine Cruickshank of Santa Ana, 9-7, 6-3.

Most of the singles interest of the day was concentrated in the Vines-Sutter, and Doeg-Tidball affairs, however. The most polished shots of the week at the lawn Tennis and Cricket Club were viewed in the victory of Vines over Sutter.

Sonnenberg Sure He Will Defeat Champion

By GUS SONNENBERG:

Having beaten DeGlane twice during the time I held the title, I have no reason to believe that I cannot do it any time I want to. I am in perfect physical condition and ready to show the fans that I have made a real comeback.

I undoubtedly, DeGlane has improved greatly since I met him, yet I don't think he can withstand my attack.

I expect to wear the heavyweight wrestling crown again after tonight's battle. In the event of loss, which is farthest from my thoughts, I will have no alibi to offer.

THE GRAPPLE OF THE CENTURY

(Bill Yeats, in Leominster Daily Enterprise)

On the spot where Wally Berger
Close by where the Marmaville
Rows the patrons of the place,
There impends a mighty struggle,
With a nation's mat fans

In the stadium of the Braves
That will thrill the rabid thousands
As the thorny ring way raves
For the steld wrestling mob
Pull fifty thousand pulses
Leap with instantaneous throb.

There'll be drama in each movement
As the hero of Hanover
Meets the gallant son of France.
Like a bull that's wild and surly
The Dynamiter's waiting tense,
A brawny child of Maul.

Will it be the flying tackle
From old Dartmouth's football field
That will see Gus Sonnenberg recrowned
Or will the savage ripperoo
And science of DeGlane
See the mighty Henri triumph,
The king of his domain?

The Goat is eating dynamite,
He butts his prison walls
With ferocity intensified
To eviscerate the Gaul
While pacing in his lair,
Eyes dilated for the fray,
The Lion of the Seine awaits

Wrestling's purse never knew
A more bitter battle for a crown
Than promised by these two.
And the crowd will come a-teeming
And pack Braves Field again
To see the gripping spectacle
When Sonny meets DeGlane.

Mad Play Sold at Auction for $125

Chicago, July 30.—Mad Play, winner of $104,553 in purse and stake money, was sold on the auction block at Arlington Park yesterday for $125. M. H. Karnes of Chicago bought the 10-year-old star from the Hal Price Headley stable.

"Sonny Tough, But I'll Lick Him," Says DeGlane

By HENRY DeGLANE

I am just as confident that I will beat Sonnenberg tonight as I was that I would beat George. I promised the fans that I would defeat George and kept my word.

I come out of that hard match in the best of physical condition and have kept in trim in actual combat and at my training camp since that time.

I realize that Sonnenberg is tough and that his flying tackle is a vicious attack, yet I think I proved in my bout with George that I have a perfect defense for this newest of wrestling holds. I expect to win.

Record Crowd to See Title Mat Conflict

By JACK CONWAY

Gus Sonnenberg and Henri DeGlane a crowd to go marching in at the Braves Field [illegible] tonight, and a crowd that will [illegible] for the championship of the world. [illegible] Paul Bowser and the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

Thirty thousand fans are expected to witness the Grapple of the Century. The crowd which will watch Dynamite Gus put his flying tackle against DeGlane's rabbit punch will be the largest that has ever witnessed a mat contest in New England.

The Christmas Fund of the Boston Evening American will receive a percentage of the receipts of tonight's show. Last Christmas this meal ticket of the needy furnished turkey and all the fixings for 7,000 persons at Christmas.

The efforts of Sonnenberg and DeGlane tonight will enable the Christmas Basket Fund to furnish food for thousands of needy persons this Winter.

[illegible] fans will be [illegible] on [illegible] at [illegible] New England [illegible] to see Sonnenberg, master of the whole bag of wrestling tricks, [illegible] wrestling champion [illegible] lost his title to Ed George in a bout in Los Angeles last Winter. George was later beaten by Stanislaus Zbyszko, who in turn was conquered by DeGlane.

Third Meeting Between Pair

Tonight's bout under the floodlights glare of the talcum at Braves Field will mark the third meeting between Sonnenberg and DeGlane. The Dynamiter has two victories to his credit and a draw. The latter bout will have more heat than the rugged Frenchman.

DeGlane is not offering any alibi for his previous defeats at the hands of Sonnenberg. He merely asks attention to the fact he previously won from George, who has also beaten him before he claimed the top of the wrestling world.

The Frenchman's specialty is a Greco-Roman wrestler and [illegible] he troubled a great deal by the flying tackle. He now has a defense for the tackle which will cause Sonny plenty of trouble.

The Frenchman calls his hand [illegible] his opponent on the floor of the ring as he comes flying at him. He knows no rest. Once in the general direction of the man [illegible] he [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Wilfred Ogg, Worcester, defeated Robert M. Smith, Winchester, 1 up

By BILL GRIMES

Although most of the first-round matches in the annual Massachusetts junior championship this morning at the Sandy Burr Country Club were one-sided affairs, four of them were decided on the 18th green and three others went 13 holes before a decision was reached.

As usual, there were a few upsets, namely the elimination of Dick Ruggles, Stony Brae, who was the co-medalist with Bill Donnelly yesterday during the qualifying round, Roger Rand, Bear Hill, grabbed the verdict from Ruggles in the 18th green. Another unlooked for result was Clark Cahill's defeat over Preston Cushing. The Thorny Lea player defeated his fellow townsman, 8 and 3.

Still another rwas the elimination of Larry Harrigan of Sandy Burr by Red Martin of Brae Burn, while Arthur Rogers, the 15-year old Scituate boy, put out a serious contender by defeating Ralph Raymond of Weymoth in a most decisive manner, winning 6 and 5.

Wilfred Crossley accounted for one of the easiest matches in the junior championship, for he defeated Edward Hackett, Brae-burn, 9 and 8. Hackett got a half at the third hole when his drive put hit Crossley's ball and bounced into the cup.

Wilfred Ogg Meets Tartar in Bobby Smith

Wilfred Ogg, who was the unsuccessful finalist last year at Belmont, ran into a tartar in Bobby Smith of Winchester. Ogg and Smith battled throughout, the former emerging a 1 up. Ogg was 77 and Smith 78.

Although Ralph Code and Bob DeWar were strokes above their usual games they had a real tussle, he former finally nosed out his opponent by a single hole.

Mike Plant of Stony Brae scored a 3& in his match with Bill Fahey, the former caddy champion, but he was only 2 up going to the 14th hole. Plant had increased his lead to 4 up, but at this point he was one down and Fahey won five consecutive holes and the match, 1 up.

Bill Donnelly, the former champion, had little trouble disposing of Francis Shields, Thorny Lea, for he was ever 4 s when the match ended on the 13th green. Eddy Peterson, Oakley, had less trouble disposing of Charles Malloy, Chestnut Hill, winning, 8 and 6.

O'Connell Wins Uphill Battle

After piling up a four-hole lead by the time he reached the sixth tee, Charlie Quinn, Chestnut Hill, saw his advantage slowly slip away from him when his opponent, Joe O'Connell, Merrimac Valley, staged a comeback by winning the 10th, 11th and 12th holes to take the match.

Quinn got down to business again in the 13th, which he won with a 3, and a 4 winning the 14th hole as Quinn took the verdict by getting a birdie at the long 17th.

For the first time in years there was a default in the championship. Ray Simmons, Thorny Lee, one of the last players to turn in a qualifying score yesterday, failed to put in an appearance this morning and Salvatore Yerardi Sandy Burr, went to the second round without swinging a club.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Page an army of cops and tell them to stand around the ring and maintain order when Stanley Stasiak, Lion of Poland, and Pat McGill of Ireland get tangled up in a 30-minute match at Paul Bowser's wrestling show at Braves Field, tonight.

Stasiak and McGill are the two toughest humans around. They could battle a school of sharks on even terms, while if they were tossed into a stone crusher they'd probably get the decision.

Mr. Boston

The box fighters used to trembie when Godfrey went on the war path. Other than Jack Sharkey, none of the headliners would have any part of Godfrey.

McGill Not Afraid of Big Pole

The fact Stasiak licked Godfrey isn't worrying McGill. The latter feels he has the ability to take care of himself in any company. He hinted he might even toss the Lion over the ropes into the arms of the cops who are sure to be around the ringside.

I wouldn't miss this scrap, I mean wrestling bout, for anything

Also be sure to see Ed George and Nick Lutze in action. These stars furnished a sensational battle in the Arena last Winter. They are two of the best of the younger generation of grapplers.

Joe Malcwicz will tackle Freddie Myers.

Jack Sherry will oppose Jake Patterson.

Buck Weaver will take on Bobber McCoy.

Wow! What a show

RED SOX HIT NEW BALL WELL

Chicago, July 30 (AP)—At last, the big war club swingers of the major league have concluded sadly that the manufacturers weren't just fooling when they came out with the "deader" baseball last spring.

The new ball, with a slightly thicker cover and a more pronounced seam, has just about shoved the game in the majors back to the hitless wonder days

An examination of batting averages for July 29, a year ago, and yesterday revealed that, with only two wet 1 legislated exceptions, the "deader" ball has made good in a big way, notably in the National League, where hits were almost as numerous as pop corn vendors last season.

This comparison shows that to date, the team batting averages for each club in the National League has been reduced on an average of 27 points while 236 fewer home runs—an average of 32 a club—have been hit.

St. Louis and Boston of the American League are the only exceptions, but both of those clubs have stronger clubs in the field than a year ago offensively

A year ago, the Browns were hitting at a .291 clip as compared with today's unofficial average of .273. Last year at this time the Red Sox were hitting .293 today they were hitting .273. The Red Sox have the same number of home runs as a year ago, while the Browns have nine more.

And now watch 'em all switch to RED TOP! Why? Simply because it's made of the finest barley malt and the 3-LB. CAN makes it the greatest value on the market. A combination that can't be beat!

Taste It! Smell It! It's ENTIRELY Different

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The Braves are headed Eastward today to play the Giants in New York on Saturday and Sunday and the Phillies in Quakertown on Tuesday and Wednesday before returning to the Wigwam, a week from today, for their last long home stay of the season.

The Warriors concluded their four-game series with the champion Cardinals in St. Louis by winning 3 to 0, which gave them an even break with the Streetmen and a record of seven victories and nine defeats since leaving town. They split a doubleheader with the Robins, took two out of four from the Reds, one out of two from the Pirates and lost three out of four to the Cubs before stacking up against the Lards.

Ed "Lefty" Brandt came back after saving the first game of the St. Louis series to blank the champions with five hits in the last game and chalk up his 13th victory of the season. Flint Rhem, the Cards' big right-hander, held his own with the Tribe1 ace for five innings, but the Warriors found him for two runs in the sixth and another in the seventh.

The Giants took the Pirates into camp again and went into second place over the Cubs, who were pushed by the lowly Phils. The McGrawmen are now just eight games back of the league-leading Cards.

The world's champion Athletics increased their lead in the American League race to 13 games by whipping the Browns, 4 to 3, while Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's ace, was blanking the second-place Senators, 6 to 0.

Babe Ruth hit his 28th homer of the season while the Yanks were turning back the White Sox and is now only two behind his teammate, Lou Gehrig, who is leading both leagues in circuit drives.

An East Boston fan sends in the following letter:

Bob Quinn is a fine fellow. He has tried hard to give us a winner but he has had some tough breaks. He deserves our cooperation, I don't know him personally. Perhaps he might not approve of this idea.

I suggest the baseball writers of Boston rally the fans to fill Braves Field to capacity next Sunday as a personal tribute to Bob Quinn. There are enough fans—real and stay-at-home, to turn the trick.

We think it's a grand idea. Don't you?

Through the courtesy of Bob Quinn 350 boys from St. Joseph's School in the West End will witness the Ladies' Day game between the Red Sox and the Yankees at Fenway Park, tomorrow. The group will be in charge of Billy West who each year makes it a practice to give the youngsters the opportunity of seeing Babe Ruth in action.

Justin "Lefty" McLaughlin, Brighton high product, made his first local appearance on the mound for the Sox in the second game against Detroit yesterday. He hurled the eighth and ninth innings and while he gave three passes, wasn't scored upon. That was much better than his only other showing of the year out in Cleveland when he was found for five runs in one frame.

Baltimore Orioles Buy Outfielder Rice

Washington, July 30—Harry Rice, Washington outfielder, will report immediately to the Baltimore Orioles in Newark, to whom he has been sold by the Senators.

Rice, Owner Clark Griffith of the Senators said, did not go to Baltimore as part of the trade whereby Monte Weaver, Senile hurling ace, was acquired by Washington.

Weaver will report to the Senators at the end of the season, when Washington's two players will be designated by Griffith.

St. Catharines, Ont., July 30 — With the arrival of the Philadelphia contingent, all of the 102 oarsmen who will compete today in the 49th annual regatta of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen are on hand.

In the Quaker group are "Big Bill" Miller, United States senior sculling champion, and Ken Myers, his teammate of the Bachelor's Barge Club, who was second to him at Philadelphia in the American national regatta last Saturday.

They are entered in the Canadian sculling title test against Joe Wright, Jr., former diamond sculls winner, and Bob Pearce, ... giant former Australian, who won the diamond sculls at Henley.

The sculling championship will be decided today.

Damon Runyon Says—

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc

New York, July 30—Best of all these new heavyweights is Charley Retslaff, of Duluth—Retzlaff, the Ripper.

I'll tell you why.

There is no mercy in his heart.

In close and that's where he loves it—he is a butcher knife of a man. He carves 'em up.

He uses his powerful arms, and elbows, and wrists and hands in a most unorthodox, but deadly manner. He is guilty of what they used to call "ripping" in the old days, working his sinewy hands and wrists across an opponent's face with terrific violence.

He mauls and hauls, and pounds and chugs. He never gives his opponent a second's peace. He has him on top of the head, back of the neck, and everywhere else. They come out of his embrace all chopped up.

I like this fellow because when the bell bangs he leaves politeness at home. He wants to know inside fighting is a mean, vicious pastime, and that the other guy is in there to knock his ears down if he can and Retzlaff, the ripper, tries to do the knocking down first.

When Mateo Osa slugged him low the other night at the Queensboro, Retzlaff promptly whaled Osa plenty low. When Osa showed a disposition to foul Retzlaff after the bell, Retzlaff didn't hesitate an instant.

He just kept blasting away, and it took Danny Ridge, the referee, and Retzlaff's manager, Jack Hurley, to pull 'em apart. Hurley just barely ducked a wicked punch in flight by his own fighter, and Ridge got a pop on the chin from one or the other gladiator, and came out of the melee covered with Osa's gore

This tall, lean-flanked, lathy fellow from Minnesota has as much ring ferocity as Jack Dempsey. He has a magnificent physique, with the waist of a girl. His face is thin and his eyes glitter with cruelty when the smoke of battle gets into his nostrils.

I think he is the making of a tremendous fighter. I hold out but one reservation at this time. I want to see him tagged hard, and in distress I want to see him on the floor. I want to know how he reacts to these situations before I pass final judgment on him. You can't tell anything about a fighter until you see him hurt.

I saw Retzlaff flatten Marty Gallagher in Cleveland with a left hook to the chin that made the 200-pound Gallagher bounce twice as he hit the floor, and knocked him absolutely cockeyed.

I saw Retzlaff carve the stocky Ficucello until the referee had to stop the fight, and I saw him pound out Osa the other night and each time my opinion that Retzlaff will go a long way has been strengthened. He's got what it takes—viciousness

Carnera or Campolo would be nice soft plums for Retzlaff. They are tall guys and he would get a pop at their chins. These short fellows that Hurley has been choosing give Retzlaff more rather than is necessary. He ought to be bowling over tall, and-up blokes like breaking sticks.

Retzlaff has the color necessary to make him a great drawing card. He tries to win his fights right off the reel. He doesn't fiddle and stall around. He takes the battle to his opponent at once, a slow beginner is in a losing spot with him immediately. If he can take a punch proportionately to his own punch ing power, he is bound to be a championship contender inside of the next year.

OPEN NIGHTS AND SUNDAYS

RED SOX WILL PLAY YANKS HERE TOMORROW

TWIN BILL IS BOOKED FOR SUNDAY

By JOE CASHMAN

The Red Sox may swim, fish, golf or do anything they desire this afternoon, it being an open date in their schedule.

After playing 20 games during the past 16 sweltering afternoons and having seven games in five days to play with the New York Yankees, starting tomorrow, the brief respite today is indeed a welcome one to each and every one of the Collins crew.

The seven-game series with Babe Ruth & Co. will consist of single games at Fenway Park tomorrow, Saturday and Monday, and double-headers at Braves Field, Sunday, and at the Fens next Wednesday. Tuesday will be an off day.

Four of these contests are regularly scheduled and the other three are the result of early-season postponements. The Yanks were rained out of one game here on their first trip in April and came back for two games on June 17 only to run into more showers.

The season's second western invasion of the Fens furnished just a little more proof, though none was needed, that the Sox can hold their own against the entries from the wide open spaces.

The natives played four games with Cleveland, five with St. Louis, five with Chicago and six with Detroit and finished up with a record of 10 victories and 10 defeats, which is a mighty creditable performance for a sixth-place club with a percentage of less than .400.

Sox Beat Tigers Four Out of Six

They took three out of four from the Indians, lost four out of five to the Browns and three out of five to the White Sox and captured four out of six from the Tigers to climb from the cellar to sixth, two games ahead of the seventh-place Chisox and four games ahead of last place Bengals.

Manager John "Shano" Collins made two predictions when the Sox opened their long home stay in the cellar. One was that the club would not finish in the basement and the other was that it wouldn't lose 100 games this season.

The Sox lived up to their reputation of being almost unbeatable in extra-inning games by taking the opener of Wednesday's double-header from the Tigers, by a score of 5 to 4, in 10 innings. It was their eighth victory in ten overtime games this season.

And despite their generosity in giving the visitors a six-run lead in the nightcap, they almost won that, too, losing out, only 8 to 6, after going into their half of the eighth trailing 8 to 1.

Jack Russell outpitched George Uhle enough so, for seven innings of the first game, but in the eighth, with a 4-to-2 lead, he weakened and the Tigers tied the count before Wiley Moore could get them out.

Lessons in Wrestling

HALF NELSON AND CROTCH HOLD

The "flying tackle" isn't the only thing Henri DeGlane, world's heavyweight champion, will have to fear when he faces Dynamite GUS SONNENBERG in the Grapple of the Century at Braves Field, tonight. Dynamite Gus is an adept with the half nelson and crotch hold also. Here you see DYNAMITE GUS SONNENBERG with JACK ALBRIGHT assisting, showing you how the half nelson and crotch hold is taken.

By GUS SONNENBERG
As Told to GEORGE GRIMM
LESSSON No. 11

If you have been following these lessons closely, you will remember that the half-Nelson hold has been explained thoroughly, and you have been taught that it is one of the various grips to create openings for pinning holds.

As illustrated, the half Nelson is used in connection with the crotch hold, which, combined, is developed into a body slam, which almost invariably spells disaster for the victim.

After securing the half Nelson, the aim of the man who has it is to press the opponent's body to the left and downward, at the same time reaching down with the right arm and grasping the crotch, lifting with the right arm and pressing downward with the left. When you have the opponent up to your waist, he is in an almost helpless position, and if you have the strength, it is no trick to slam him to the floor, at the same time falling with him and extending your body crosswise on his chest and pinning him to the mat.

Once a fellow gets this telling grip on an opponent, he can afford to smile, for it is almost a sure sign of victory. With this slam there is, of course, the possibility of injury to the fellow who is thrown, for if he lights on the peak of his shoulder, it may mean a broken blade or injury to the ligaments of the shoulder.

PORT INTEREST URGED

"The people of New England should give much of their attention to the present port of Boston that they may be ready for new developments to come."

The Port of Boston Society is made up of individuals who want to see their home port grow in importance, as well as persons of other New England cities who are doing their bit to put Boston a port in the lead.

The Port of Boston Society, organized under the auspices of the City of Boston Commercial, Industrial and Publicity Bureau, with headquarters at 80 Federal st., Boston, is pushing forward the work of rallying to the support of Boston as a shipping point for freight to and from foreign countries, as well as urging New Englanders contemplating a tour of Europe or a visit to another country, to embark and debark at the port of Boston.

Its advantages over other ports along the Atlantic seahoard from Maine to Florida are well known to shippers and voyagers not within this country, but in foreign countries. The Port of Boston Society urges it as a duty on its members and citizens generally to help abouts to broadcast the port's advantages.

Fill out and mail your application for membership today to the bureau at 80 Federal st., Boston

EVERY day brings us closer to a new and scientifically

DEVELOPED method of oceanic transportation in keeping

WITH the steady and remarkable progress we have made in other things,

AND with this development the Port of Boston cannot help but

DUE to its fortunate geographic location in being closer to Europe than its competitors,

RECENTLY, while reading the American, my attention was called to the ACTIVITIES now being inaugurated by The Port of Boston Society

REGARDING the effort of this organization to cause the public to MANIFEST a new and thoughtful interest in their Port. I would say that SUCH interest may be termed a "paving of the way" for

THE future projection of the afore said new method in oceanic transportation,

RAPID means of all sorts of travel is now in vogue and

OCEAN journeys of tomorrow are going to be made with

NO less speed than journeys made on land, so the people of New England should GIVE much of their attention to the Port of Boston that they may be ready for new developments to come

Please enter my name upon the membership roll of "The Port of Boston Society." I am not to pay any dues. My only obligation is my moral support.

I hereby promise to loyally uphold the purpose for which this organization stands; namely, to help make Boston the finest and busiest seaport from Florida to Maine.

each other to that of any other person; but when we are away there is no reason why we should mope by the fireside, devoid of interest in anyone else. That will have too much spirit for that. And because we find pleasure in the company of another, now and then, does that mean that we care any the less for each other? In fact, I believe the pleasure of companionship between a married couple may be heightened and sharpened by social contact with other people.

WOULD CALL QUITS

Both of us feel that if either of us should develop any unusual interest in another person, that fact would reveal the death of our mutual love.

In such case, the only sensible thing would be to call quits. But certainly we anticipate no such eventuality. We have known each other long enough to realize that our love is not so easily shaken. If we had thought our mutual attraction as a week was to be dissipated by chance comradeship with others, we should never have married.

Naturally my work brings me into contact with a great number of women, many of them extremely beautiful and pleasantly companionable. My connection with the stage has given me delightful friends among chorus girls as well as stars. And I shall continue to count them friends.

Fay's work, likewise, has brought her into contact with handsome and attractive men in Hollywood, but her beauty has won the admiration of many men here, and she will continue to number them among her friends.

I have always been emotional, and it seems I have been with more than an ordinary amount of feeling. My music has been an outlet, for these emotions, and has given me the greatest pleasure. But since, too, have played a prominent part in my life, and frankly, I enjoy their company. So to have now the girl I love best, brings me wonderful pleasure.

Through my career I have worked hard, with all the energy had—and for long stretches with sometimes only four hours sleep a night. I did not spring from a metropolitan city overnight, but have put into my work all I had in me.

I have my reward in whatever success I might have achieved, but even more in the knowledge that I brought some measure of happiness to my listeners of all ages and circumstances of life.

Naturally, there has been a real satisfaction and content in these rewards, but this greatest satisfaction and happiness to have come one now sharing these rewards with me.

STEELS DIFFER ON SLASHING SALARIES

By FRANK H. SKELDON

Bethlehem Steel directors, meeting for dividend action, apparently have one problem less before them in the salary slashing of U. S. Steel earlier this week. U. S. Steel directors decided to cut salaries of officers but keep up wages of workers. Bethlehem directors feel latter should be paid actually higher salaries to their officers, though reduced, because in view of a lingering fight in the chancery court of New Jersey.

The expectation is that, through the bonus reductions, the result will be that the net sums paid Bethlehem officers will be less than they have been receiving. Should dividends be called "wages" or salaries" be paid to stockholders? Employes of both U. S. Steel and Bethlehem are in the mind, large stockholders. A share in U. S. Steel's dividend from $7 to $4 yearly means a large decrease in amounts received by stockholder wage earners as well as by others.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

U. S. Steel set another new bear market low soon after the opening today, but signs of support appeared later. Spotty rallies in Steel inspired confidence elsewhere, as the market's old bell-wether was closely watched for evidence to price trends. Reports of increased activity in steel operations also afforded a bit of cheer.

Rails Are Heavy With More Selling

Railroads were heavy today with more offerings. Losses of a point to two or more soon appeared for such leaders as Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific, Southern Railway.

Electric Bond's Affiliates' Net

For the year ended June 30 last, three important affiliates of Electric Bond & Share probably will report the following earnings, as compared with those for the 12 months ended March 31 last and March 31, 1930, according to usually reliable estimates.

American Power & Light, $2.45 per share, against $2.75 and $3.96. National Power & Light, $1.75 per share, against $1.81 and $2.23. Electric Power & Light, $2.86 per share, against $2.86 and 3.32.

Secondary Rails Well Regarded

Owners' mutual owners of standard railroad common stocks are understood to have developed considerable interest in the rails of secondary grade. The reason for this is reported to be their belief that the freight rates will be increased these impoverished carriers stand to benefit most. Stocks in this group favored today: Kelly Great Western, Western Maryland and "Frisco" are said to be enjoying considerable investment interest.

HIGHER TREND IS REGISTERED IN WALL ST.

New York, July 30—The stock market in Wall St. was disinclined to mourn the low state of steel earnings for more than one day. And heaviness in the early trading was quickly thrown off today.

Fails were conspicuously heavy in the first hour, and steel shares eased a little further, but a gradual upturn then set in, and had erased most of the losses by midday.

MODERATE GAINS

During the afternoon, moderate gains were registered in most of there. Bonds, however, were somewhat heavy, particularly the rail lines.

Chrysler, which has reflected powerful pool activity whenever market conditions seem favored of late, was pushed up 2 points to close in the year's high.

Du Pont sent Eastman rose as much, and gains of a point or so were shown in Case, Curtiss-Wright, Westinghouse, Consolidated Gas, Chesapeake and Ohio, Best and Pennsy.

Nickel Plate was again a weak feature in the rails, tumbling 10 points. Erie 5d preferred dropped 4.

There were numerous losses of a point or two in the carriers, some of which were regained. Rubbers, hem and U. S. Steel each lost a point, then recovered.

Declaring of the Bank of England rate from 3½ to 4½ per cent, on top of last week's advance from 2½ to 3½, had not been generally expected, in view of the checking of the flow of gold to France. Nevertheless, it was an aggressive move which bankers here were inclined to applaud.

'TWILIGHT ZONE' OF GOLD.

Weekly statement of the bank, showing an additional loss of about $30,000,000 in gold, reducing total stocks to about $565,000,000, the lowest since the autum of 1929, when the bank boosted its rate to 7 per cent, indicated urgent need of measures to attract a return flow of metal, and it was presumably for this purpose that the rate was again increased.

Despite the stoppage of the main torrent of metal to France, which is to Holland, continued, $3,000,000 more going today.

While leading bankers here have informally expressed willingness to grant almost any credit that the Bank of England might need, the bank has apparently taken measures to help itself, rather than seeking aid here. Disinclination in negotiate loans in either Paris or New York is regarded here as a matter of pride.

Wall Street was less interested in the dividend and earnings announcement of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. after the close of the market than it was in U. S. Steel's quarterly meeting Tuesday. Nevertheless, there was considerable difference of opinion as to why the action Bethlehem might take on its common dividend.

A reduction in the $4 annual rate was regarded as a foregone conclusion, since earnings are believed to have fallen considerably under preferred dividend requirements.

Wall Street recognizes that adverse dividend news is by no means out of the way. Omission of Barnsdall's dividend caused no surprise, and further slashing of oil company disbursements is expected. Further railway cuts also are being forecast.

The local money market was easier, with call money offered outside at 1 per cent for the first time in several days.

Int. Utilities Is Planning Expansion

Negotiations may be completed shortly whereby International Utilities Corp. will make an offer to acquire control f American Equities Co. though an exchange of stocks. Successful completion of such plans would create a union of more than $50,000,000 of assets. American Equities on Dec. 31, last, had total assets of $36,409,287, while those of International Utilities amounted to $19,068,980.

American Ice Co. Earnings Smaller

American Ice Company reports for the June quarter a net profit of $771,252, equal, after preferred dividends, to 91 cents a share on the common stock. This compares with profits of $1,037,215, equivalent to $1.35 per share for the same quarter.

Kansas Southern Income $1,501,191

Kansas City Southern, including Texarkana & Fort Smith, reports a net operating income for June of $229,775, compared with $310,615 in the corresponding month of last year.

Net operating income for the first six months of this year totaled $1,501,191, against $1,786,050 in the first half of 1930.

'Am. Machine, Metals Net Loss Smaller

American Machine & Metals, Inc., reports for the quarter ended June 30 a net loss of $2443, after depreciation, interest and other charges, against a net loss of $53,001 in the preceding quarter.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Employes in the United States Customs Service at the Custom House were given half the afternoon off yesterday because of the excessive heat. Collector Wilfred W. Lawton issued the order. A skeleton staff was maintained.

NOTABLY SHEEPSHEARMEN IN

Three sheepshearmen were among the group of arrivals coming into the Fish Pier with good catches today. Several mackerel seiners were also among the arrivals. Prices on some varieties of fish took an upward trend. The steamer Prince George, from Yarmouth, N. S., brought in lobsters, cusk, salmon and mackerel, caught off the Nova Scotia coast.

NUN BUOY

A white painted first class nun buoy, to be known as the Consition nun mooring buoy, has been established in Marblehead Harbor, it was announced by the Committee of mariners by the United States Lighthouse Bureau here. The buoy will be discontinued as the Frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides," leaves the harbor. The buoy is placed on the following bearings: 675 yards, 254 degrees from Marblehead Lighthouse; 675 yards 193½ degrees from Tower Rock; and 1,000 yards, 76 degrees from the Marblehead Neck standpipe.

MATHERS ON LEAVE

Capt. William H. Mathers, skipper of the United Fruit steamer San Gil, has a stretch on his annual vacation. Capt. Willis Janvey, chief officer, went out in command of the vessel. Leo J. Moore of Milton was the only passenger. He will make the round trip to the tropics and return. The San Bruno, with Capt. H. Friswold in command, arrives today from Tela, Honduras, with passengers and bananas.

VAGABOND CRUISE

Several New England tourists were included in the list of passengers leaving for New York on the United Fruit Co. steamer, Zacapa, bound on a cruise to Jamaica, Panama and Colombian ports. Adeline Gibbs and Alice Gregg of Brookline, Alice M. Craig of New Bedford and Mrs. Ethel H. Aldrich of Providence and his son also are listed.

They're From N. E.!

Boardman and Polando Set Record

All hail Russell Boardman, John Polando and their Yankee plane, Cape Cod.

New Ambassadors of the Air.

Let the world shower its acclaim upon these young men, but when they come back to us let us receive them with a welcome that never can be forgotten.

For they are our boys.

Welcome Back, Mr. Mitton

The people of New England affectionately welcome the return of George W. Mitton to the complete management control of the Jordan Marsh Company.

The name of Mitton and the genius of himself and his family associates had been for forty-four years associated with the success of a great mercantile establishment synonymous with fine traditions.

None knows the need of the New England people more adequately and none is more enthusiastic for New England development and success than New Englanders themselves.

For those reasons and for the further reason that Mr. Mitton has enjoyed a full return to good health there will be a general satisfaction.

How to Keep Cool

Let's not get excited about the heat. THAT is the one thing we ought to avoid. The rules are simple.

Eat sparingly, four or five times a day, if necessary, but do not indulge in heavy meals.
Wear light clothing.
Avoid over-exertion. Get plenty of sleep, eight hours at least.

Above all, DON'T FRET. That is the easiest advice to give and the hardest to follow, but it is the most important of all.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

But God Is There

IS YOUR LIFE somehow empty?

Do you feel sometimes as though you were fumbling . . . fumbling . . . through the dark, reaching for something you cannot name?

Elsie Robinson

Once you were so sure that you knew what would bring you content. Pleasure . . . adventure . . . love . . . power . . . success. Things . . . beautiful, costly things. Ease and luxury . . . freedom from worry. Well, the years have passed and, in a measure, your wishes have come true. You've had what you wanted. Not all you wanted, but enough to bring content, if content can come that way. And yet, you're still not happy. Life, yet, somehow, is empty.

Strange, isn't it? Strange that we Americans, with all our cleverness, our power, our wealth, can never be satisfied. Always we must go around with that hunger in our hearts . . . seeking something . . . seeking what?

There's a letter in my mail this morning. A blue morning . . . one of those mornings when nothing seems worth while. Why not? Flowers at the window . . . food on the table . . . why does nothing seem worth while? And then this letter. Like a door opening into a little room where once you played . . . a little room where you have not been for a very long time.

"There is a Negro colony on the eastern shore of Maryland, unbelievably isolated," she writes. "In the midst of this community stands a small mission. It is made of rough, whitewashed boards and a rudely constructed cross tops it. Inside, the ceilings and walls are covered with burlap bags, whitewashed also, and at the front is a small platform of boxes for the preacher.

"There is a Bible on a small table before the platform, that has been read and studied until there isn't a whole page left in it. Posted above the table is a terribly misspelled copy of the baptismal rite. There is also a small pump organ . . . five wooden benches . . . and an oil lamp with a reflector made from an old pair of scales.

"The organ scarcely plays, but when that congregation starts to sing and the preacher begins his sermon, I'll wager no one starts whispering gossip to kill time. No! They sit there with their simple souls shining in a glory in their eyes, worshiping their God because they love to, not because it's a duty or an old American custom.

"They're not worrying about depression, the stock market crash or political graft. They're not blaming God for their troubles, they're thanking him for their blessings. And yet some of them don't know where the next meal is coming from.

"Many a willing hand went into the making of that chapel; patience and care and love fashioned it . . . and God is there. You can feel His very presence . . . These black children of God, what they couldn't teach us! The white man can scorn the Negro for his ignorance, his laziness, his dishonesty, but when it comes to religion, it's hats off!"

Ragged, ignorant, helpless, hungry—shut away from wealth and power by white scorn and black skin—yet happy. You and I miserable with a thousand things in our hands. But they . . . whitewashed sacks and weather-beaten boards and a bench set close to the yellow clay. BUT GOD IS THERE. Is that the answer?

In France -:- By O. O. McIntyre

Napoleon Revered

PARIS (By Mail)—Late yesterday the new President of France whisked through the streets in his auto from the Longchamps races to his leafy Elysee palace. It was practically his first appearance since the inauguration. There were hand waves and huzzahs but the anthusiasm was lukewarm.

The truth is France is a republic with pronounced monarchical leanings. Queen Wilhelmina, coming over from Holland to see the exposition, needs almost an army to protect her from the crush. The King of Spain, the Prince of Wales and other royal playboys have to come incognito to avoid the mob.

The reverence for Napoleon is an outstanding characteristic of the Parisian. One of the sure - fire methods of jolting a taxi out of his usual pout is to ask him to drive to the Emperor's tomb. The Frenchman realizes that only through a dictator has Paris been made the extraordinarily beautiful city it is.

Physically there have been few changes in Paris since Napoleon's day. As a dictator he could look out a palace window and observe: "There's a lousy part of town. Let's run a boulevard through it." And behold a Champs Elysees or a Place de la Concorde!

The decaying grandeur that is Versailles and responsible more than anything else for the twilight of kings will ever kindle the spirit of reverence among the populace. The true Frenchman has a gaudy eye. He loves royal trapping and all the sundry insignia of pomp and power.

Yet to me the suffocating splendor of Paris is in a short while cloying. Even this morning I have been sitting at my typewriter wondering just why I am here. And if I cannot think of a good reason in a few days, I'm going to move on. The wild gipsy strain.

* * *

It has become au fait—I sometimes wish I could not remember the language—among fashionables to partake of chicken liver breakfasts in front of Foquet's on Champs Elysees. Among those I saw while strolling by there today were Count Salm, Al Woods, the theatrical producer, and at an obscure table that tragic figure known as "France's living dead man"—Captain Alfred Dreyfus.

* * *

The French waiter has become resentful of being addressed as "garcon" and his guild holds weekly meeting of protest. He wants the elegant title of "Monsieur garcon!" Par example, he points to the more respectful attitude in Germany where the "kellner," or waiter, is greeter as "Herr kellner." I'm willing for one to call him the most grandiloquent name in France and toss in a royal salaam so long as he permits us to chirrup to him like we do the horse at home. It is more fun.

* * *

Hors d'oeuvre hounds—of which Bob Brinkerhoff is roughly six—will find a paradise at the Brasserie Universelle where daily at luncheon there are 43 varieties on display in three tiers. And not so far away is The Rendevous of the Mariner, a seaman's hangout with napkins in rings hung on the wall behind each chair. It is the first time I've seen napkins rings since leaving Missouri, where I was teethed on one.

* * *

And it is rather amusing how the corner saloons absorb the nomenclature of their surroundings. Thus cater-cornered from the beautiful edifice Notre Dame is the Cafe Notre Dame. Incidentally, walking around Notre Dame in the moonlight is worth the buggy ride over. Last night my wife and I circled it twice after the theater and in its vast silence broken only by the soft curring of pigeons we actually found ourselves holding our breath. Another round and I would have been resting.

I tried unsuccessfully to high-hat one of those international bar-flies who spotted me at a table in front of Oscar Wilde's favorite rendezvous, La Closerie des Lilas, today. He inquired: "You are not O. O. McIntyre by any chance?" I replied: "I'm O. O. McIntyre but not by mere chance. It was a special act of Providence." Yet this did not prevent him from pulling up his chair and cadging two five franc drinks.

Just Folks

Offering Dad a Real Saving

The father sat in his red arm-chair,
"And what do you want?" said he,
"And why do you quake, and why do you shake Whenever you talk to me?"

The young man said: "It's a lovely day!"
And he shifted in his chair,
"Is that all you've called on me to say?"
Asked the father sitting there.

For his tongue could scarcely stir,
"But we're really thought of a splendid plan

"We've thought of a plan," the father asked,
"Some money to save for me?
Have two great brains on the scheme been tasked
And whose can the other be?"

"Your daughter's, sir," said the youngster grave,
"We've talked it all out, you see.
"All she's costing you now you'll save
By letting her marry me."

Intermarriage? Yes

But What About These?

SOME SPECIMENS HARDLY "ELIGIBLE"

Sir Arthur Keith, learned British scientist, says "pooling of blood" is the only thing that will bring "international brotherhood and world peace."

He wants all peoples to mix in marriage and thus produce a race in which all would be represented and race hatred would die out.

Every race, says he, "black, brown, yellow and white," would thus "distribute in a common progeny the inheritance which each has come by in their uphill struggle through the leagues of prehistoric time toward the present."

In the end, doubtless, perhaps a million years from now, possibly much sooner, there will be only "one human race" on earth.

It will inherit, let us hope, the genius, good qualities, power, intellect of all the races that have gone before, and will have eliminated all the murderous, grasping, selfish, treacherous qualities.

That universal perfected race might come by intermarriage, or "blood pooling." But a better race may come in future, as better races have come in the past, by killing off inferior races.

There was a time not long ago when Providence seemed to work in its own mysterious ways for our improvement. Famines, plagues, wars killed off the less able.

But now philanthropy protects all the different races, keeps them alive, saving them from plague with the help of science and from famine with modern agriculture.

There is in every race, even with the "lower classes," so-called, in each race, hatred of blood mixture. In British colonies "half-caste" children, mixtures of white and native, are practically outcasts.

And biologists assert that certain races cannot be successfully mixed, because the progeny inherits all the bad qualities and none of the good qualities of each parent. Some biologists believe that our false civilization threatens the wise plans of Providence by keeping alive the inferiors, with not enough "superiors" to preserve a balance.

We have struggled along, moving upward steadily since the Stone Age, 12,000 years ago. It is to be presumed that we shall struggle through the next million years and the next ten million years with equal success and steady improvement.

There is no doubt whatever that race mixtures among human beings have increased their power and developed civilization.

Next came the Romans, with a contribution from all races, and greatest in their time. Then came the French, a mixture of Romans, Gauls, Germans, Basques, all strange mixtures, and France was the greatest race.

Then came the English, perhaps most thoroughly mixed of all, and then the United States, and we are not doing so badly.

Taking Homes for Taxes

Fall River's Protest

There appears, on the surface at least, to be a good deal of merit in the protest of the Fall River people against the scheme to put up their property for sale for 1930 unpaid taxes.

The people of that fine old city have been attempting to emerge from a peculiar financial debacle.

For ten years or more the public money was wasted in a prodigal spree. The tax rate is high. Property valuations have soared. The municipal financial riot was an unhappy supplement of the more grievous loss they had sustained by the depression of the textile industry, upon which the public largely depended for sustenance.

The State officials now in charge must realize that these people cannot repair the wreckage of ten years in a single day, however valiant their efforts may be.

State Treasurer Hurley thoughtfully proposed that a moratorium of one year at least should be granted on the mortgages upon real estate unoccupied or whose tenants and owners were out of work. His idea contained at least the thought of leniency necessary to the times. Our State officials in charge of Fall River could absorb that principle, rather than crowd the people to the wall. They'll pay when they can. They always have.
